Spies' Trial Will Go On Despite Plea To Courts

Session Set Today; Power of President Paramount in Such Cases, Biddle Says

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

No matter what is decided in the case of the German spies, there were eloquent indications last night that, even if he had to defy the Supreme Court, President Roosevelt would not submit to any encroachment upon his authority as Commander in Chief of the armed forces.

Attorney General Biddle asserted the supremacy of the Presidential office with cold and solemn emphasis in his argument before the highest court yesterday.

The court may announce at noon whether seven of the German spies will be allowed to file petitions for writs of habeas corpus.

Military Trial to Resume

But without regard to the proceedings that have occupied Chief Justice Stone and seven other justices for two days, the President's Military Commission will resume the trial of the eight spies at 10 o'clock this morning.

As the crucial test of the President's war powers neared its climax—reaching with its implications the extent of his authority over inflation, industrial coordination and labor allocation as well as over spies—the eight Germans who provoked it had become obscured.

The Germans came in submarines last month to carry out spying and sabotage in America for the German high command. President Roosevelt closed the civil courts to them by one proclamation and ordered them to trial before seven generals by another.

Final Arguments Ready

With all the evidence given, and with Biddle and Maj. Gen. Myron Cramer ready for the final arguments in which they are expected to demand that the eight men be put to death, two colonels sworn to defend the prisoners asked the Supreme Court to stop the trial.

The colonels were Kenenth C. Royall and Cassius M. Dowell. They said the President's decrees were unconstitutional, that the Military Commission was unlawful and that seven of the Germans were entitled to writs of habeas corpus.

Evidently welcoming a hearing upon the President's war powers, including issuance of these proclamations and possibly others, Attorney General Biddle joined Royall in urging the Supreme Court to hear argument on whether the petitions for habeas corpus might be filed.

Royall said that the Bill of Rights remains in force, even in behalf of enemy soldiers, except where the courts are closed or in the actual area of belligerent op-

Army Pilot Dies In Plane Crash Near Oxon Hill

An Army pursuit plane crashed and exploded three miles south of nearby Oxon Hill, Md., last night, killing the pilot, Second Lieut. Stephen J. Blodykas of Oyster Bay, N. Y.

The one-seater ship, on a routine flight from Bolling Field, pulmmeted to earth on the property of George Johnson and bounced into Livingston Road, where it struck a utility pole. Electric light service in the neighborhood was disrupted.

Lieutenant Blodykas was attached to Bolling Field. An Army board of inquiry will investigate the crash.

Shame!

WITHIN rifle range of the White House and the Army and Navy buildings one of the most revolting spectacles ever produced anywhere is running day and night.

A walkathon at any time, in any place, is the lowest form of entertainment ever devised. It consists of couples of young morons dragging each other around a hall hour after hour, day after day until they fall unconscious or exhausted. The crowds are there to see them collapse and to scream encouragement as they attempt in every manner to remain upright. Side show hallyhooers arouse the audience to hysteria and altogether it is the most sadistic spectacle of disgusting exhibitionism in America.

Most self-respecting cities have banned these nauseating orgies by ordinance or police regulation.

But here in Washington—and in wartime—the walkathon is allowed because officials—the Commissioners, the Corporation Counsel's office, and the police—are busy looking the other way.

In every other spot in Washington one sees hundreds of fine young soldiers and sailors and citizens busy with the welfare of their country.

In Riverside Stadium there is everything to be ashamed of—every appeal to the lowest instincts.

"Every pimp and streetwalker in town is here," a veteran police reporter said last night. "And there are a lot of good kids getting wrong ideas here too. This is just unbelievable."

HOW Goebbels would love to publicize that spectacle in the Nation's Capital as typical of "decadent America." He would probably send an Iron Cross to the District officials who permit it.

Jennings Randolph, chairman of the House District Committee, would like to stop the filthy exhibition. He is getting an official run-around.

If the police do not stop it—and ban recurrences forever—Washington can pretty well make up its mind why. It will mean they have been called off—and maybe an investigation as to the source of those orders wouldn't do a bit of harm.

Walkathon, 'Just Within Law,' Rolls On

The walkathon at Riverside Stadium went into its twenty-third performance last night as District officials continued to answer queries pertaining to the contest's desirability with such vapid remarks as "too bad, but it seems to be legal."

Complaints that contestants were being treated "brutally" were, of course, disputed by health officials, who made a check but indicated that health regulations at the stadium seem to have been complied with and that nothing could be done. Health officials are to make an official report today following an investigation.

Police officials, too, offered little hope to complainants that the so-called walkathon could be closed unless, they said, it could be shown the performance was "a nuisance."

So the "Parade of Torture," the game of "How Long Can They Endure Pain," continued its masochistic course last night before several hundred spectators who screamed lustily when contestants showed signs of pain or collapsed skull first to the floor from exhaustion.

It was, the announcer said, the spectacle of the century, the walkathon to put all others into obscurity, an exhibition such as never before had favored Washington with its presence. It some respects, he spoke the truth.

"Champeen" Dynamite Race

Washington—or a sadistic segment of it—had never seen its equal in unmitigated insanity. There are those who hope it never will again.

Wednesday night the jungle drum beaters, those sharp-eyed men who make sure that nobody lags behind in the sprints, were at it again during the "colossal, champeen dynamite race." They urged four runners into a state of collapse. Three were carried from the floor, limp and haggard, their legs scarred from floor burns, their breath coming in short, painful gasps.

They echoed the sentiments of Ray Alvis, who has produced such exhibitions for years. Alvis put it this way: "We ain't killing nobody out here. We're putting on a good athletic show."

The "athletic" show to date has

Plunges From Porch; City Observance Declared 'Dandy'

Washington got its third daylight air raid test, a surprise, between 2:35 p. m. and 3:22 p. m. yesterday. One authority called it "reasonably successful." Another called it "a dandy."

Between 2:57 p. m., when the "red" alarm flashed, and 3:22 p. m., when the "all clear" came, the United States Senate closed business, an action hurriedly taken after a three-minute delay.

Woman Killed in Fall

A woman, in midst of the siren blasts, fell from a fourth-floor porch and was killed. She was Evelyn Minnick, 25, Negro, of 1643 Thirteenth Street Northwest.

Midafternoon traffic came to a startled halt—streetcars, buses and automobiles—with the suddenness of a film showing a movie street scene suddenly jamming, to leave a "still" picture before the eye.

Pedestrians fled to the shelter of the nearest house or store. A police official estimated that F Street between Fourteenth Street and the two theaters in that block were cleared of pedestrians in 10 seconds.

Supreme Court Undisturbed

The United States Supreme Court, isolated and insulated against outside commotions, remained on the bench during the test period. There were instructions that the Court should not be disturbed.

The House was out of session. The wailing blasts sounded through the Senate chamber and after a 3-minute delay, during which dispo-

Tax Credits Foreseen on Old Debts

Sen. George Predicts Big Increases Will 'Compel' Deductions To Aid War Effort

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

High individual and corporate tax rates in the $6,271,000,000 House revenue bill will force the Senate Finance Committee to approve special tax deductions for debts, Chairman Walter F. George predicted yesterday.

George told reporters he thought Congress would be "compelled" to help individual taxpayers and business concerns to pay off debts incurred before the war, lest high rates in the bill make it impossible for them to make payments.

The Georgian's declaration for debt amortization provisions to relieve "all types of taxpayers" followed a series of protests by small business witnesses that steep corporate rates may force them to cut down on war plant expansion, for lack of capital, and put them out of business at the end of the war.

Mortgages Cited

After the hearing, George said he was convinced that the committee must provide some allowable tax deductions for debts, particularly those incurred before January, 1942, when drastically increased tax rates were not in prospect.

He said he thought it essential that individual taxpayers, who have mortgages to meet on homes and on land and other assets, be given this relief, but opposed amortization for persons "who were just borrowing to spend."

In the case of corporations, he said he believed tax deductions for debt were very definitely in the interest of increased war production. He said he had evidence before him that some business firms were "very reluctant" to take on additional war contracts which would require them to borrow more money to expand their plants.

"With the high tax rates in the House bill, you can't convince them that they could pay back their borrowings," he said. "Many who have rapidly expanded to meet war needs feel that they will have to fold up entirely after the war, when the flow of Government business ends, unless they are given relief in some way."

Treasury Held Sympathetic

George said he thought the Treasury was "sympathetic" to some form of debt amortization, but up to this time had been unable to work out a formula.

The chairman suggested the provision "would be limited as to the type of debt and the percentage of income that can be applied to debt payments."

In the case of individuals, George thought it possible some provision might be made for debts due to unusual medical expenses, as well as mortgages on home and property, but he drew the line at rents—"you've got to stop somewhere."

"If we approve postwar credits, then I think it would be possible to work out limited debt amortization for investment in bonds and for investment in insurance," he said.

George also consistently has been 300,000 Put in Camps Or Deported, Says Government in Exile

By the Associated Press

London, July 30.—The Yugoslav government reported tonight that 16 villages in German-occupied Slovenia had been obliterated and all their inhabitants shot for violation of occupation rules.

Vice Premier J. Krek said the government was unable to obtain an estimate of the number slain, but declared:

"The Germans recently have deported 160,000 Slovenes, including the most prominent scientists, teachers and physicians, to Poland, Serbia or Croatia after shooting 1064 hostages in Maribor and Bled."

In the section of Slovenia occupied by the Italians, 140,000 men have been put into concentration camps, 410 hostages slain and 42 villages burned recently, he added.

Kaiser Chafes To Start Cargo Plane Program

By Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

Henry J. Kaiser, West Coast shipbuilder, yesterday asked for a chance to sit down with President Roosevelt and two or three industrialists and get started on his program to build a fleet of giant cargo-carrying planes for speeding American men and materials to the United Nations fighting fronts.

Once given a starting signal, Kaiser said, his shipyards could be turning out flying cargo boats the size of the Martin "Mars" within 10 months, as surely as they will turn out a Liberty ship next month in 29 days.

Kaiser, brimming with the enthusiasm that has made him a veteran at "doing the impossible," gave the Truman and Lee Committees the formula by which he believes shipyards can turn out giant cargo planes, as well as a few victory slogans for accomplishing the job.

Gives His Formula

His formula—the shipyards already have about 75 per cent of what is needed for turning out giant planes. They have area for working, the organization of man power and facilities for moving men and materials, and, 30 per cent of machine tools now in the yards could be used directly for planes. The other necessary tools could be found in that half of industrial America still waiting to work in the war effort.

Some of his slogans:

"You can't be licked on anything you set out to do if you have will to do it."

"When you can't buy a thing, the only thing to do is build it, quick. That's the way to break a bottleneck."

After testifying to the Truman and Lee committees, Kaiser spoke to a

49 Jap Planes Raid Darwin; 9 Shot Down

Enemy Driven Off Heights on Mountain Trail to Port Moresby

By the Associated Press

General MacArthur's Headquarters, Australia (Friday), July 31 A powerful attack on Port Darwin by 27 heavy Japanese bombers escorted by 22 Zero fighters was broken up yesterday by the "brilliant interception of Allied fighters and the attackers lost nine planes, General MacArthur reported early today.

The defending planes accounted for seven bombers and two fighters and lost only one, the communique announced.

The heavy attack was made in the afternoon after an earlier light aerial thrust which resulted in no damage or casualties.

The Japanese sent nine heavy bombers against Port Hedland, on the northwestern sector of Australia, yesterday and caused slight Delegate Dimond of Alaska said yesterday "there is some slight circumstantial evidence" that the Japanese have occupied the Pribilof Islands about 250 miles northwest of Dutch Harbor.

The Navy has neither confirmed nor denied his reports, Dimond added.

Russians Say They Are Wiping Out Footholds South Of Don's Big Loop

By Eddy Gilmore
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow (Friday), July 31.—Inspired by the call of Josef Stalin, the Red Army hurled the Germans back in their thrust at Stalingrad yesterday and waged a battle to annihilate those of the enemy who crossed the Don south of Tsimlyansk, the Russians announced today.

At Voronezh, on the German north Don flank, too, the Germans gave up new positions in the course of bitter fighting, but south of Rostov it was admitted the weight of German arms again had been too much and a further retirement had been forced to southeast of Bataisk.

Bataisk, 15 miles below Rostov, had been given as the scene of previous fighting in that sector.

Tanks, Infantry Beaten Back

Many German tanks and infantry regiments, driving with all their power across the steppes of the eastern Don bend in an effort to reach the river and drive upon the Volga River city of Stalingrad, were beaten back near Kletskaya, 89 miles northwest of Stalingrad, it was said.

"Southwest of Kletskaya our troops repelled enemy attacks and in some sectors pressed the enemy back," the communique declared.

Several hundred Germans were annihilated, nine tanks destroyed and 14 planes shot down, it added.

Front line dispatches broadcast on the Moscow radio gave a more graphic description of a seething two-day battle.

"Day and night the shelling never dies down," it said. In the past two days the fighting has been heaviest where the Don makes its great bend. In this key sector the enemy is going all out to smash through to the river. The enemy is making a furious drive for full mastery of the right bank of the Don at any cost.

"The battle is raging over an area extending several dozen miles along the front and in depth and with every type of troops engaged.

"In the sky the fighting never ceases."

Gas Rules Entangle Henderson, Their Author

Salesman Refuses To Sell Fuel in Can, And Cites Regulation

Leon Henderson, Federal czar of gasoline rationing, added something yesterday to his store of knowledge about the facts of life in wartime America.

First he ran out of gas.

Then a gasoline station attendant, sticking to the rules as they appear in the coupon rationing book, refused to sell him any.

Then he hired a taxicab to take him to work.

It was shortly after 7:30 a. m. when Henderson stepped hard on the starter of his 1936 car. It was 7:55 a. m. when he arrived, gasoline can in hand, at Doc White's Service Station, 2014 Florida Avenue Northwest. It was 8:05 a. m. when John LeRoy Leigh, the attendant, arrived to open the station for business.

Henderson, frequent patron of Doc White's and, he believed, well known to Leigh, asked the attendant to fill the can. Said Leigh:

"Can't do it. Regulations say the gas has to be served in the tank of the car. Look at the notice inside your ration book."

JOHN LeROY LEIGH
He Can't Figure It Out

Henderson—"I know, but I'm out of gas. How am I supposed to get the car in here?"

Leigh—"Get somebody to push you in here, I guess."

Henderson—"That's not necessary. The regulations provide for emergencies like this. I'm responsible for those regulations. I ought to know. Got a copy? I'll show you."

Leigh did not have a copy of the regulations. But he did have Henderson's ration book, and he could read:

OPA Chief Finds Rule Authorizing Sale, Too; But Too Late to Help

"The station attendant is permitted to deliver gasoline only into the tank of the vehicle described on the front cover of the book. Do not ask him to violate the law."

Henderson walked back with his empty can. He phoned a garage to come and get his car—there was something wrong with the motor, anyway.

When he reached his office, he got out a copy of the Office of Price Administration's best seller, "Gasoline Rationing Regulations." On the front cover he wrote: "Doc White: See page 40—Leon Henderson." Then on page 40 he marked this paragraph:

"Bulk transfers (meaning transfers into a container other than the fuel tank of the car for which the ration book is issued) may be made of an amount of gasoline not in excess of one unit, to enable a vehicle stranded for lack of fuel to reach a source of supply."

Henderson sent the marked copy right out to Doc White's where Leigh read it—and became impressed by the complexities of gasoline rationing.

OWI Kills Henderson's 'Strong' Reply to Ickes on Gas

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

The Office of War Information, headed by Elmer Davis, last night stepped into a fresh dispute among Government officials on Nation-wide gasoline rationing and blocked issuance of a "strong" statement by Price Administrator Leon Henderson replying to earlier assertions by Secretary of Interior Ickes.

Ickes, who also is War Petroleum Coordinator, revealed earlier at his press conference that he was emphatically opposed to such rationing as a means of increasing the delivery of petroleum to the rationed East Coast area.

Later word spread that Henderson was preparing a quick reply But after reporters had waited for some time at the OWI headquarters they were finally advised that "there will be no statement."

Robert W. Horton, head of the OWI press offices made the announcement. Henderson could not be reached for comment.

Newsmen recalled that Davis had told a press conference some time ago that "If two eminent men in the Government fundamentally disagree this office will lend its assistance to them, if so desired, to see if they can possibly harmonize

Off on a wedding trip—the destination more closely guarded than the average military secret—are Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hopkins, who exchanged wedding vows shortly after noon yesterday at the first White House wedding since 1918.

Attired in a white linen suit, President Roosevelt was one of the 19 guests attending the marriage of his right-hand-man to Mrs. Louise Gill Macy. The Oval Room, where many an historic conference has been held, was banked with white chrysanthemums and gladioli and the couple received their vows before the white marble fireplace with the Rev. Russell J. Clinchy officiating.

Among those attending the ceremony were Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff; Admiral Ernest J. King, Commander in Chief of the United States Fleet; Rear Admiral Ross T. R.A.F. Sets Big Fires At Saarbruecken

Hunter Heads U. S. Fighter Unit Abroad

By the Associated Press

London, Friday, July 31.—Brig. Gen. Frank O'D. Hunter of the U. S. Army Air Forces, has arrived in Britain to command American fighter units in the air offensive against the continent.

The arrival of three other officers on the staff of Maj. Gen. Carl Spaatz, chief of the U. S. Army Air Forces in the European theater, also was announced.

They are Maj. Gen. W. H. Frank, commander of the air service command; Brig. Gen. Robert C. Candee, commander of general ground air support, and Brig. Gen. Asa N. Duncan, air force chief of staff.

They arrived as American fighter pilots equipped with fast American pursuit planes were undergoing intensive training in Britain.

Hunter, until recently assigned to air forces headquarters in Washington and with the Eighth Air Force at Bolling Field, D. C., was in England for several months in 1940 as a military observer.

In France during the World War he served at the front as a pursuit pilot for seven months, and was credited with the destruction of eight enemy planes.

Frank, a 56-year-old former commander of the Third Air Force, was graduated from West Point in 1910. Originally an infantry officer, he transferred to the air service during the last war.

Duncan, 50, served during the Mexican border crisis and in 1920 became an officer of the Air Service, Regular Army.

In France in the last war, he was detailed for duty as an observer with the Ninety-First Aerial Squadron.

He was on duty in the office of the chief of the Air Corps when the Army took over the air mail, and became chief of military intelligence for those operations.

Candee, 50, was commissioned in the regular Army in 1916, he saw duty as a cavalry officer on the Mexican border. He is a specialist in bombardment tactics and at one time was senior bombardment instructor at the Kelly Field, Tex., advanced flying school.

Inferno Visible 75 Miles; Fighters Later Raid French Coast

By Drew Middleton
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, July 30.—British fighter offensives, timed to keep up an almost continual racket of bomb blasts and gunfire, swept the French coast from near the Belgian border to near the tip of Brittany early tonight following another R. A. F. heavy bomber blow, this time against Saarbruecken in the Reich.

Thirteen British planes were lost in dusk offensives, in which Spitfires scored direct hits on hangars and dispersal huts on an airdrome in the St. Omer area, set fire to a tanker off the coast and damaged a motor vessel.

Seven of Germany's speedy, high climbing new Focke-Wulf 190 fighter planes were shot down.

Fires Visible 75 Miles

A waning "bombers' moon" lighted the way to strong forces which swept over the thickly built coal and steel center of Saarbruecken Wednesday night when great fires and blasts visible 75 miles were set off. The attack was the seventh on German industrial centers in ten nights.

"Great damage" was done in the 700-mile foray to Saarbruecken. Canadian bombardiers said they saw their bombs drop from 4000 feet into the closely packed steel mills along the river and they believed a huge gas container blew up. (Other towns besides Saarbruecken were bombed, the Germans said. They said a theater was smashed.)

Nine planes of the large bombing force, which included many big four-motored machines, were lost in the attack.

Bay of Biscay Raided

Meanwhile, informed sources said, sweeps by British four and two-motored bombers into the Bay of Biscay where they look for Nazi U-boat packs traveling to their North Atlantic hunting grounds have become so strong that the Germans have been compelled to convoy their submarines with Condor flying boats.

Dogfights between British bombers on the one hand and huge flying boats, Messerschmitts and Arado-196 heavily armed seaplanes on the other have become almost a daily occurrence. Running fights between Condors and bombers frequently take place hundreds of miles at sea, with little hope of rescue for the vanquished. The Arado-196, armed with two cannon and at least three machineguns, usually does not go out so far.

damage and one casualty by bombing from a great height, the headquarters announced.

Foe Periling Moresby Driven Off Key Heights

By Lee Van Atta
International News Service Staff Writer

General MacArthur's Headquarters in Australia, July 30.—Kokoda, with its strategic airdrome and radio station, tonight assumed a key position in the skirmishing through New Guinea's jungle wilds. United Nations patrols succeeded in driving advanced Japanese columns from Kokoda Heights, less than 60 miles from Port Moresby.

Japanese forces, using somewhat the same tactics they followed in Malaya, had gone halfway through the mountainous, dense Papuan jungle before their drive was halted.

The push seemed at least temporarily staved off by successful skirmishing operations defending Markham Gap, through which the jungle trail runs to Port Moresby.

A spokesman at General MacArthur's headquarters admitted today there had been casualties on both sides in the three days of fighting.

The spokesman described Kokoda itself as being "no man's land." This presumably also included the airdrome and radio station that appear to be the principal Japanese objectives.

Since MacArthur's forces holed in at Kokoda proper Tuesday, there have been no signs of heavily increased Japanese pressure. There was a growing feeling, however, that the enemy was fighting to clear a path for a powerful land drive against Port Moresby.

Village Is Key

Kokoda, a village of perhaps 26 white families, actually is the key to the Markham Gap, and the road to Moresby.

While Allied ground units have been battling in the jungles, United States Lieut. Gen. George H. Brett's fliers have continued their steady smashing at Japanese bases at Gona Mission and Buna, attempting to cut off enemy supply routes. A bomber attack also scored a direct hit on a Japanese destroyer off New Guinea's coast. The destroyer was seen trying to make port, smoke pluming from it.

Huge, Speedy Air Transport In Production

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, July 30.—Mass production of a giant new twin-engine transport plane, which will be a formidable invasion weapon as a carrier of parachute and ground troops with jeeps and other mobile equipment, was announced today by Curtis-Wright Corp. with the approval of the War Department.

The speed and carrying capacity of the new plane, which is called the Commando C-46, are Army secrets, but it is believed to be far in advance of any type transport so far used by the Germans. Two Pratt & Whitney engines of 2000 horsepower each give the Commando a speed approaching that of combat planes. A prototype of the Commando flew the Atlantic nonstop in slightly more than nine hours.

The Commandos are being built at the corporation's plant in Buffalo, N. Y., and have undergone exhaustive performance tests and demonstrations to show how fast troops and equipment can be loaded and unloaded. The procedure which will be followed in disembarking troops in an invasion zone was worked out in maneuvers in which troops from the 712th Military Police Battalion took part.

In an invasion the tremendous ship will roar down from the sky to a landing. Large doors in the fuselage will swing open and specially designed ramps be pushed out. In a matter of seconds heavily armed troops will be on the ground in fighting position with jeeps rolling down the ramps, ready to be manned and rushed into battle.

In nothing that has been published about German invasion tactics and equipments has there appeared any indication that the Nazis have transport planes large enough to carry mobile equipment inside. Photographs of their air tank-carriers all show baby tanks suspended under the fuselage. And, according to reports from Russia, the tanks are too small to be very effective.

The main carrier used by the Germans is their Junkers 52, a trimotor plane inferior in size and speed to the Commando. According to Jane's "all the world's aircraft, 1940," the JU52 weighs 14,324 pounds unloaded, carries a useful load of 7676 pounds and has a maximum speed at low altitude of only 172.8 miles an hour. The Commando weighs 50,000 pounds fully loaded.

Burdette S. Wright, vice president of Curtiss-Wright in charge of its airplane divisions, said that the Commando was "made to order" for the work of Army transport.

5 Raids Cost 102 Millions, Worth 20 Times That

London, July 30 (INS).—The last five major R. A. F. raids against Germany, covering the period from May 31 to July 29, have cost Britain $102,128,000 but they have cost Germany 20 times that, it was estimated tonight.

The five major raids were staged in the following order:

Cologne, May 31; Essen, June 1; Bremen, June 25; Hamburg, July 26; Hamburg, July 28.

From 600 to more than 1000 planes were used in each.

British Intend To Invade, Cripps Asserts

By International News Service

London, July 30.—Expectations that a second front may be opened in the near future rose again in London tonight with renewal of the government's pledge to invade the continent and the arrival in England of four high ranking officers of the United States Army Air forces.

Sir Stafford Cripps, Lord Privy Seal, told the House of Commons that Britain has "military intentions" to invade the continent. He refused to elaborate.

Later in the day members of Parliament attended a secret session at which Soviet Ambassador to London Ivan Maisky was said to have made an "impressive statement."

Presumably his statement had something to do with the oft-voiced Russian demand that Britain and the United States open a second front before it is too late.

(In Washington, meanwhile, Soviet Ambassador Maxim Litvinoff paid a hurried visit to President Roosevelt, presumably bearing a message from the Kremlin. "The situation remains what it is," Litvinoff told reporters.)

Cripps told the House there was no possibility that the government would agree to a public or secret statement about military plans before the summer recess. He also officially declared that Prime Minister Winston Churchill would not deliver a war review before recess.

He assured the House, however, that the government could reconvene the House on a moment's notice, should that become necessary.

An official statement was issued after Ambassador Maisky spoke. It said:

"Ambassador Maisky addressed a crowded meeting of members in Parliament with Sir Percy Harris in the chair.

"Maisky gave a full and frank statement on the progress of the war, particularly on the Russian front. Questions were asked and Maisky gave the frankest replies. Maisky greatly impressed those present with his description of the war position."

Italians Establish Air Link With Japs

Cairo, July 30 (AP).—The Axis already has established a direct air communications link with the Japanese, reliable British sources said today.

They declared that Italian planes are flying regularly between Italian territory—possibly Libyan air bases—and Japanese-occupied territory—perhaps Sumatra.

Indian Leader Vows to Weigh Allies' Pleas

New Delhi, July 30 (INS).—Maulana Abdul Kalam Azad, president of the powerful All-India Congress Party, tonight declared that any suggestion for the solution of the Indian problem made by the United Nations would receive the Congress Party's "fullest consideration."

Azad's remarks were made in answer to the recent exposition of the Indian situation, given by Sir Stafford Cripps.

Speaking through an interpreter, Azad told reporters that his organization has no objection to continued British rule of India until a provisional government is formed.

The conference with Azad, who generally remains in the background despite his official position, followed Mohandas K. Gandhi's pronouncement that he might call upon the leaders of the Congress Party to undertake a fast until death, despite their "natural objections."

Canadian Contingent Arrives in Britain

London, July 30 (INS).—A large contingent of Canadian reinforcements and technicians has arrived safely in Britain, it was officially announced tonight.

Included were members of the Canadian Air Forces.

between Rostov and Stalingrad, where for days the Germans have been expanding their bridgeheads across the Don, the Red army also reacted as if in response to new official pronouncements that the time had come to end withdrawals.

"Retreat Is Impossible"

The Communist Party newspaper Pravda in an unusual editorial said today: "One must understand that retreat is impossible."

In the Tsimlyansk area, the Soviet information bureau said simply, "our troops continue to fight with the object of annihilating the enemy group which had crossed the river."

But it added that the Germans were attempting to break through to the south and were throwing in new tank and infantry forces.

(In broadcasts from Berlin the German high command said that German armored forces had stormed and captured Proletarskaya, on the Stalingrad-Caucasus Railway 100 miles southeast of Rostov, 180 southeast of Stalingrad and 55 below the Don.

(The foad, "the last important railway communication between the Caucasus region and the rest of the Soviet Union," was cut at several points, the high command said.)

Despite the use of reinforcements and dogged counterattacks which resulted in a wedge being driven into Russian lines in one instance, the Germans were "dislodged from a number of strong points" at Voronezh, the Russian communique said.

Though the momentum of the German steamroller seemed slowed, there was no tendency among the Russians to minimize the grave peril to the Russian military position.

Premier Joseph Stalin admonished the Red army:

"Let us be inspired in this war by the courageous images of our great ancestors, Nevsky, Donsky, Minin, Pozharsky, Suvorov and Kutuzov. Be inspired by the victorious banner of the great Lenin."

The official news agency Tass said that Hitler was exhausting swiftly his last man power resources as "a result of immense losses" and that forces were being transferred from France, the Lowlands, and Norway to fill the gaping holes in his lines.

Dispatches told how cool antitank riflemen were inflicting terrifying losses on German tanks and vehicles rumbling slowly forward in the great Don bend west of Stalingrad.

Chutists Reported in Caucasus

London, July 30 (INS).—Great masses of German parachutists have dropped out of the skies onto the western tips of the Caucasus at the town of Temryuk on Taman Peninsula and Nazi infantry rafts have followed across the narrow Kerch Straits, the Vichy news agency said tonight.

The news agency story was an elaboration of a broadcast earlier in the day by the Nazi-controlled Vichy radio.

It was reported without confirmation of anykind that the Nazis consolidated several footholds on the peninsula despite savage opposition. The parachutists were said to have come from the Crimea, just 8 miles across the Straits of Kerch.

Cairo Bombed Despite Threat Against Rome

By the Associated Press

Cairo, July 30.—Axis air raiders dropped bombs on Cairo proper in the predawn moonlight today in defiance of a long-standing threat by Prime Minister Churchill that the R. A. F. would reply to any such attack with raids on Rome.

(Churchill made his threat before the fall of Greece, declaring Rome would be a prime target if either Athens or Cairo were bombed. The Germans have bombed right up to the edge of Athens, attacking the Port of Piraeus and destroying dock installations and shipping, but the capital was unharmed.)

The moonlight attack on Cairo and widespread Allied airdromes in the Nile Delta were made by small flights of Axis bombers apparently seeking to cripple the sources of Allied bombings on Marshal Erwin Rommel's sea and land communications.

Cairo's defenses threw up a great antiaircraft barrage. The raid was light and today only a few were found who could testify that bombs did fall close to them.

The lull in the desert battle west of El Alamein was broken only by incessant artillery duels and patrol actions. The latter revealed the northern sector of No-Man's-Land was littered with heaps of unburied enemy dead.

U. S. Tankmen Almost Ready For Rommel

By George Lait
International News Service Science Editor

Somewhere in the Egyptian Desert, July 30. I am able to reveal tonight that American tank crews now are preparing to go into action in the desert war in the immediate future.

They will fight beside United Kingdom and Empire troops.

While I am not allowed to reveal numbers, I can say these men are representative of all sections of the United States.

Under the direct command of Col. Thomas R. Kerschner of Lincoln, Nebr., these tank crews are part of U. S. Maj. Gen. Russell P. Maxwell's Middle East forces.

These men now are winding up advanced training in a desert area a few miles behind the actual front. Before long they expect to move up to that portion of the battlefront where they are most needed to strengthen lines.

I spent several days with our troops and witnessed the tough training they are undergoing. Sand storms and intense heat have not interfered with it.

Advisers from the British tank corps are lending every assistance. Similarly the American tank crew members are taking advantage of every bit of information about tank warfare in the desert gathered by the British.

All the Americans are extremely well trained and the men themselves are anxious to get into battle.

Americans Want Offensive War, Says MacLeish

Cambridge, England, July 30 (AP). Archibald MacLeish, Librarian of Congress and assistant director of the United States Office of War Information, declared today that the American people "are still unanimous in their demand for an offensive war."

Giving a Rede lecture at Cambridge University, MacLeish said Americans "are no longer willing merely to fight the Fascists' war—to accept a war forced upon them by their enemies and to fight back in that war and eventually win it.

"They propose, with your help and the help of their friends in Russia and China and other countries, to fight their own war—a free man's war having a free man's purposes."

He declared isolationism in America "is dead," but added "isolationists are still isolationists."

Two Americans Missing On Sweep With R.A.F.

London (Friday), July 31 (AP).—Flight Lieut. Joseph Mooney of East Hempstead, N. Y., and Pilot Officer Leroy Skinner of Webb City, Mo., members of the second eagle squadron, were reported today as missing after fighter sweeps over German-occupied territory.

Both the young Americans with the R. A. F. were veterans of aerial dogfighting.

Kaiser Chafes to Get Started on Cargo Plane Program

luncheon of the National Press Club, all in a space of 3½ hours. Reactions to his plan included these:

Senator Truman (Democrat), of Missouri, chairman of the special Senate committee investigating the national defense, said. "If Kaiser were turned loose, I think he could build the planes."

Lee Advocates Program

Senator Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma, chairman of the Military Affairs Subcommittee investigating the proposal to set in motion the Kaiser program "because it looks to me like we're in for a long war, and that means more and more flying freight."

Senator Lee disclosed also that he favors, too, bearing down now on the proposal advanced by Robert W. Filmer, designer of the Army's P-47 fighter, for building medium-sized cargo planes of plywood, utilizing the furniture and piano making industries to furnish the plywood parts.

Pointing out that his conclusion was not final because more evidence remained to be heard, Senator Lee said that his solution would be to start building the moderate-size planes now, and that Filmer's plan sounds "reasonable and feasible."

Filmer told The Post that he might seek to interest Kaiser in the plywood ship design. His plans call for a two-engine plane, with 140-foot wingspread, capable of carrying nine tons of cargo 1500 miles, or smaller loads over longer distances.

Sees Advantage Over Kaiser Plan

Filmer said his plan had an advantage over the Kaiser program in this way: Using the same amount of factory floor space, 25,000 of his plywood planes could be turned out in the same time it would take to get 100 giant flying boats the size of the Mars. The carrying capacity of the 25,000 plywood planes would be roughly 100 times that of the 100 Mars-size flying ships.

The Lee committee also heard Theodore Wright, assistant chief of the War Production Board's aircraft branch, and member of the WPB air transportation committee, declare that he favored increasing the percentage of cargo planes and that Filmer's plan merited consideration.

Undersecretary of War Patterson later told a press conference that cargo plane production must be balanced against the need for combat aircraft. He said that while it was desirable to have more cargo planes, the country could not lose sight of the urgent need for building combat aircraft and merchant ships.

Record of Accomplishment

Kaiser's testimony to the Truman and Lee Committees advanced a mighty record of past accomplishments as a promise that he could carry out his cargo plane proposal.

He built the Boulder and Bonneville dams, the first two years ahead of schedule, after he was told it couldn't be done. He went into the shipbuilding business when he "had never seen a ship launched before, much less built one," and set a new record by turning out a Liberty ship in 46 days, compared with World War records around 300 days, and a Maritime Commission goal of 140 days.

"I hope in the next two months to build a ship in less than 30 days," he declared. "As optimistic as I am, we're doing better than I thought we could."

Kaiser said that he had been forced to start building ships with second hand tools and that the same thing could be done with cargo planes.

Fears Ship Curtailment

At one point Kaiser said that he was prepared to go on building ships while starting now on planes, but he said, "I think we will be curtailed on ships in spite of ourselves" by lack of steel shapes.

Kaiser said that he had started a steel plant April 1 which would be producing pig iron by December, and steel plate early next year. He said he was hoping for the WPB to give clearance on his building a structural mill for shapes.

Asked about the view of some Government experts that shortage of materials and facilities for plane engines would prevent his plan, Kaiser said, "We're not going to build engines; if the auto industry can't build the engines, it would be a sad thing."

Kaiser said that if the President would call together Tom Girdler, board chairman of Republic Steel, and Glenn L. Martin, whose firm built the Mars, "and myself, I think we would tell him, yes, we can build the planes."

Asked to Return Today

Senator Lee asked Kaiser whether the ship plant of Andrew Jackson Higgins, near New Orleans, whose Maritime Commission contract for 200 Liberty ships was canceled before the plant was completed, could be converted to making cargo planes.

Kaiser said that while he had never seen the Higgins yard, if Higgins "has the ability to organize labor, and train labor, and service materials, that's about all he's got to do," to build planes.

Senator Lee asked Kaiser to return for more testimony this morning.

WAVES Selected As Sailorettes' Name

More Musical Than WRNR, Navy Says; Procedure for Enlistment Is Announced

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt yesterday signed the bill that admits women into the Naval Reserve—and the Navy Department let it be known immediately that the new sailorettes will be known as WAVES.

Officers worked hard to get around the non-musical WRNR initials of the official name: Women's Reserve of the Naval Reserve. They did it by saying everybody accepted for the unit would be Women Appointed for Volunteer Emergency Service.

The WAVES will be the first women to serve as Navy officers. Members of the Navy Nurse Corps hold rank corresponding to that of officers, but do not have full officer status. Women who served with the Navy in World War I held the status of yeomen (F), were known generally as yeomanettes.

The new branch is created to relieve male personnel for duty at sea. It will have 1000 commissioned officers, who will be recruited first, and about 10,000 enlisted members.

Officer WAVES must have a college education and be between the ages of 20 and 50. Other qualifications are being studied by the Navy Department, and will be announced shortly.

The first thing for a woman with a longing to be a WAVE to do, the Navy said yesterday, is to submit a written request for a preliminary application blank. In this they should state their age and educational background. The request should be addressed to the director of Naval Officer Procurement for the city or Naval district in which candidates reside. Offices are in Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Washington, Richmond, Charleston, Miami, New Orleans, Chicago, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Seattle.

Application blanks will be mailed to candidates and "all who appear to be qualified to appear for interviews" will be called in for questioning, aptitude tests, and physical examinations.

With the exception of a small group selected immediately for assignment to administrative duties in connection with the training program, all officer-candidates will undergo "indoctrinal training" before being commissioned and then will be sent directly to duty or to special schools for technical instruction.

Three Schools Planned

It was revealed yesterday that three schools will be set up in connection with the training program, the first to be established at an Eastern women's college—name unrevealed—the second in the Midwest, and an additional one for enlisted women.

Approximately 300 prospective WAVES will be appointed in "appropriate ranks on a probationary status" and given one month's instruction in the first Reserve Midshipmen's School. All other candidates for commissions will be enlisted as apprentice seamen in the class V-9 program. Following a course of one month they will become reserve midshipmen and undergo additional training to fit them for assignment as specialists, being commissioned only after they have received their training.

Dr. Mildred McAfee, on leave from the presidency of Wellesley College, will head the WAVES and hold the rank of lieutenant commander.

The Navy Department announced yesterday that an advisory educational council is assisting Navy officials in planning the WAVES program. Dr. McAfee is a member-at-large. Virginia C. Gildersleeve, dean of Barnard College, is chairman and representative from the Third Naval District.

Others representing other Naval districts are: Ada Comstock, president of Radcliffe College, first district; Mrs. Thomas S. Gates, wife of the president of the University of Pennsylvania, fourth district; Meta Glass, president of Sweet Briar College, fifth and eighth districts; Alice M. Baldwin, dean of Women's College, Duke University, sixth and seventh districts; Alice C. Lloyd, dean of women, University of Michigan, ninth district, and Mrs. Malbone Graham, professor and author, eleventh, twelfth and thirteenth districts.

U. S. Freighter Sunk, Captain Taken Prisoner

By the Associated Press

The seizure of an American ship captain as a German submarine's prisoner of war, the first incident of its kind publicly reported since the United States entered the conflict, was disclosed yesterday in the Navy's announcement of the loss of a medium-sized American merchant vessel.

Brazil's official announcement also of the sinking of her 4942-ton freighter Tamandare—attacked by an Axis submarine off Trinidad July 26—boosted to 404 the Associated Press unofficial score of United and neutral nations' sinkings in the western Atlantic since December 7.

Capt. Henry Stephenson of Larchmont, N. Y., 66-year-old skipper of the American ship sunk July 9 in the South Atlantic, was ordered aboard a German submarine, survivors reported at an East Coast port.

The seamen said the English-speaking U-boat commander asked for the captain, and then told him:

"You are a prisoner of war. I want you to come aboard. I am very sorry."

To their pleas that the captain be permitted to accompany them home, the survivors said, the submarine officer answered: "We'll treat him well. He'll be aboard only about 11 days."

Three crewmen were killed in the encounter, but 43 others escaped.

The Tamandare, Brazi's tenth merchant ship loss since the submarine-sinking of the 5152-ton Buarque off Cape Henry, Va., on February 15, went down with four crewmen killed. Forty-five survivors were landed at Port of Spain, Trinidad.

Midland Flying School Graduate Sinks Sub

Midland Army Flying School, Midland, Tex., July 30 (AP).—Mark up the first score for this world's largest bombardier college—one German submarine now at the bottom of the Gulf of Mexico.

Lieut. Carlus Turner, of Redbud, Ky., as far as can be ascertained, is the school's first graduate to smash an Axis objective.

Brig. Gen. I. Davies said today Fort Myers Army base had reported that Lieutenant Turner, a member of MAFS class 42-7, has received official credit and a letter of commendation for sinking a German submarine off Yucatan in the Gulf of Mexico on June 21.

McNutt Studies Program To Mobilize U. S. Man Power

The White House announced yesterday that Paul V. McNutt, chairman of the Man Power Commission, was completing a study on ways of mobilizing the Nation's man power most effectively for par purposes.

Stephen Early, Presidential press secretary, said that the subject had been "rather thoroughly explored" in the study underway for about six months.

It is understood that the mobilization plans indicated by the study would require additional legislation from Congress.

A total of 60 million persons might be affected by any man power mobilization order. Among the elements considered for possible inclusion in the proposed legislation are:

1. Registration of all women between 18 and 65 to reveal the maximum number who are available for jobs in war industry.
2. Rigid regulation of employment in war industries to eliminate labor piracy, which is already a critical problem in the Detroit area and on the West Coast.
3. Elimination of voluntary enlistment of men in the armed services. It has been pointed out that many of the country's ablest technicians have volunteered for military service, thus taking themselves out of vital war work.
4. Subsidization of young men to enable them to complete their college educations and thus provide the war program with needed technical skills.

The whole program, which may be subject to considerable revision when it reaches the White House for final approval, is being designed to tide the country over the severe man power shortage which is expected next year.

It is understood that the Administration desires to withhold many of the details of the program until it is "ready to go," to avoid disturbing labor relations.

Byrd Asks Full Price Control, Including Farm Goods, Wages

Warning that the fight against inflation "has reached a critical phase," Senator Byrd (Democrat) of Virginia yesterday appealed in the Senate for over-all control of prices, including farm products and wages.

In a contrasting Senate speech Senator Taft (Republican) of Ohio said "the immediate danger of inflation has been exaggerated" to some extent, but Taft presented a five-point program to control inflation.

Byrd told the Senate the price control bill did not provide for the stabilization of wages and that "no price control can be effective which eliminates the largest single element in costs."

He opposed substitution of any program of subsidies to industries caught in a price ceiling squeeze for an all out over-all price control measure, protesting that "subsidies would cost billions of dollars and would encourage waste and inefficiency in private business."

Taft in his speech opposed the over-all price ceiling theory, which he said would amount to "freezing all prices, wholesale and retail, and all wages." He said he did not "think it is necessary to fix all of the prices in the country." Taft offered the following five-point program, which he said was based on a sound fiscal policy:

1. Expansion of the Treasury's borrowing program so bonds may be sold almost entirely to corporations and individuals instead of to the commercial banks.
2. Revise the farm price floor to 100 per cent of parity.
3. Adopt the Ball bill "to give the War Labor Board control of wages and salaries, with a provision that they should not increase wages more than provided in the recent Little Steel decision."
4. Create an over-all Commodity Control Board with administrators to carry out the control.
5. "Gradually adapt the price-control measures to the stabilization theory instead of the ceiling theory; and eliminate price fixing on all minor items which have no substantial effect on the cost of living."

Senator Byrd in his speech predicted that mounting appropriations and expenditures will confront the Federal Government with a 200-billion-dollar debt after enactment of the tax bill.

He urged Congress to cease piling up appropriations while a backlog of 163 billion dollars appropriated by Congress for war remains unexpended.

Research Group Attacks Sponge Iron Plan As WPB Grapples With Materials Problem

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

The War Production Board yesterday drove ahead on many fronts to meet a new and rowing crisis in materials supplies as some of its experts studied a report from the National Research Council of the National Academy of Sciences attacking proposals to increase steel production by developing plants for making "sponge" iron.

These were some of the day's developments as WPB officials sought to erase materials "shortages"—particularly in steel—which, they insisted, resulted principally from top-heavy programming of American and United Nations war requirements plus sweeping production gains in some parts of the Nation's war factory.

1. A report from the council's committee on metals and minerals called the production of "sponge" iron costly and inefficient and advised that the construction of plants to make it would retard, rather than advance, war production. Bureau of Mines experts, backed by members of Congress, have long insisted that by making "sponge" iron the country could solve the problem created by dwindling supplies of scrap steel.
2. WPB and Army and Navy officials were reexamining requirements for both this country's armed forces and the armies of the other United Nations, not only in the light of the country's productive capacity, but also in the light of changing battlefront needs. In one quarter it was reported that officials are trying to get the British to scale down the quantity of semifinished steel they have been told they could expect from the United States.
3. WPB prepared for announcement today its plans for "cutting back" its projected program for expansion of electric power facilities. The "cut back," it was said, would be approximately 40 per cent of the original program and might mean power rationing in some areas. By abandoning some of its power projects, WPB would be able to divert critical metals to war plants, where they are needed for making munitions now.
4. Petroleum Coordinator Ickes ordered a critical materials survey covering five branches of the oil industry, including production, refining and transportation. The survey sought to determine how much critical material the industry used in the second quarter of this year, how much it had on hand at the end of the second quarter and anticipated requirements for the last quarter. The information will be submitted to the WPB Requirements Committee.

Critical Accumulation Reported

Ickes' order followed WPB reports of top-heavy critical materials accumulations not only by certain members of the oil industry but also by certain railroads. By requiring the oil industry to redistribute steel, one source reported, 80 per cent of the total actual steel requirements of the industry was saved. Similarly, some railroads were forced to disgorge steel hoards for the use of other railroads, a move, it is believed, which may have saved the roads from ultimately drastically curtailing operations for lack of steel.

WPB officials insist that whatever the materials supply, there is enough of everything to win the war. "I don't think you have to worry about the size of the (production) program," said one. "All you have to do is to get someone to shoot it off—and in the right direction."

"Out of Balance"

Admittedly, however, American war production is seriously "out of balance," i. e. more small arms than small arms ammunition, resulting from disproportionate distribution of materials. Officials admit that the total requirements for the United States, the United Nations, lend-lease, etc., with the demands those requirements are making for new construction and consumption of materials in existing facilities probably are far higher than the American economy will be able to supply.

They concede also that the mechanism for controlling the flow of materials—priorities and allocations—is not perfect. But they contend also that a large part of their trouble comes from the race for more and more production, a race in which more efficient production units are outstripping others making parts of the same product, a race that has resulted in huge accumulations of materials in the form of finished parts that can't be used until other parts makers catch up.

"Sponge" Held Unsatisfactory

In its report to WPB, the research council has laid out 15 reasons why no effort should be made to develop "sponge" iron production. The report maintains that not only is "sponge" costly to produce in labor and materials, but the product itself contains many impurities that make it unsatisfactory for making steel. Rather than undertake to develop a program for substituting "sponge" for scrap, the council urged research for the development of a process for making powdered iron.

WPB'S new policy on future electric power development is expected to involve a general overhauling of the program along several lines. Plans for additional power facilities are likely to be scrapped and projects already undertaken either slowed down or stopped altogether in areas where further expansion of war plants has been halted. Rationing is expected to be relied upon in areas where additional power facilities were planned to meet increased civilian demands. Expansion of power facilities generally is due to be limited to areas of expanding war production.

Pancake Flour Ceiling Raised

Price ceilings cracked again yesterday under pressure of higher raw material and labor costs, with approval by the Office of Price Administration of an increase of 1 cent a package on low-priced, unadvertised brands of pancake and buckwheat pancake flour.

OPA Administrator Henderson said that unless dealers had been granted speedy relief to permit profitable handling of the items, many sellers would have been forced to discontinue the low-priced lines.

"Customers would find in these stores only the high-priced products and they would in effect have been forced to pay 50 to 100 per cent more than if the adjustment provided herein were not permitted," Henderson said.

Approximately 70 per cent of many dealers' sales are in the low-priced brands which have been retailing at 5 to 7 cents a package.

Henderson estimated yesterday that the break in retail price ceilings on preserves, jams and jellies would cost the Nation's housewifes about $3,750,000 a year.

Announcing methods by which manufacturers could establish their new prices, to compensate for increased labor and material cost, Henderson said the price advance of about 15 per cent ultimately would be passed on to consumers through similar adjustments in wholesale and retail prices.

The increase is part of the general advance in prices of canned fruits which Henderson has described as "inflationary" and said were forced on him by congressional farm policies.

Army to Ban Leave For Political Candidates

The Army policy of granting leaves to officers so they may return home and run for public office will be discontinued, Undersecretary of War Patterson said at a press conference yesterday.

Officers who have been granted leave for this purpose will not be recalled he said, but no such leaves will be given in the future.

Ford, 79, Sees Cargo Planes Linking All Lands After War

FORD OBSERVES BIRTHDAY ANNIVERSARY — Henry Ford, observing his seventy-ninth birthday anniversary yesterday, visited the little shop in which he built his first auto, sat in the car and gazed at the equipment he used half century ago. "I guess I'm getting on in years," he said

By David J. Wilkie.
Associated Press Staff Writer

Detroit, July 30.—Freight-carrying airplanes will go far toward solving the world's distribution system after the war, but the "family airplane" to replace the family car still is somewhat remote, Henry Ford said today.

It was Ford's seventy-ninth birthday anniversary and, viewing the first car he built half a century ago, along with the somewhat crude equipment he had at that time, he remarked that he guessed he "must be getting on in years." But he was in perfect health and enthusiastic about the future.

In the little Martha-Mary Chapel in Greenfield Village, Ford was presented with a bouquet of 79 roses by the children who attend the various schools in the village. From Mrs. Ford he received a new necktie and a luggage bag.

"Perhaps out of this war we may learn to think," he went on; "and if you cause people to think, ultimately they will think right—after they have made a lot of mistakes. That's education and it is only through education that we can have happiness and prosperity."

Ford called women in industry "just as good as men and, in many instances, possessing a little better brain capacity." He said he had no apprehension that the war industries and their high wages for women would have an upsetting effect upon normal domestic concepts in the postwar era.

"After the war they'll resume their place in the home," he asserted.

The war, Ford said, "is piling up a tremendous volume of human needs and at the same time it is creating a lot of mechanics, who will find plenty to do when peace returns."

Although he predicted wide use of cargo-carrying aircraft after the wa, he said, he foresaw no decline in the use of motorcars. "We'll always have roads," he said, "and as long as they exist, we'll have motorcars."

The postwar automobile design will be toward lighter weight vehicles and wider use of plastics, he added.

Ruling Issued on Murphy Jobs

By James B. Crane
Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

Supreme Court Justice Frank Murphy, former Attorney General and now a lieutenant colonel in the Army, must resign from his military post or he cannot return to the bench.

This was ruled yesterday by the Justice Department in a confidential memorandum to President Roosevelt.

The memorandum, requested by an "anonymous source," according to high Justice Department officials, was written by Solicitor General Charles Fahy.

It held that Murphy cannot accept his Supreme Court pay and his pay as an Army officer simultaneously. The ruling declared that the justice must quit the Supreme Court or quit the Army.

The opinion was issued on an informal basis, without official status. It was said, however, that if Murphy decides to stay in military service, the ruling will become official and he will have to give up his court post.

At the Supreme Court, it was said that Murphy is still drawing his court pay—$20,000 a year in semi-monthly installments.

Although the War Department refused last night to make any official statement as to Murphy's status in the Army, it was understood that he is in the service on an inactive basis. It could not be confirmed whether he is drawing Army pay.

Priest Takes Stand Against Molzahn

By the Associated Press

Hartford, Conn., July 30.—A witness who said he traveled the length and breadth of the United States pretending to further the aims of members of an alleged Nazi-Japanese spy ring told a Federal Court and jury today of two meetings with the Rev. Kurt Molzahn of Philadelphia who, he said, was trying to help Gerhard Wilhelm Kunze, German-American Bund leader, leave the country.

The witness at Molzahn's trial on an espionage conspiracy charge was the Rev. Aleksi Pelypenko, a Ukranian who testified that he left the Russian Orthodox clergy in 1925 and was then ordained in the Ruthenian rite of the Roman Catholic church.

Testifying in Russian, through an interpreter, the stocky, smiling witness, clad in clerical garb, said he was in the employ of the FBI from March, 1941, until August 18 of that year and told about two brief meetings with Molzahn, one in mid-May last year and the other later that summer.

Was Referred to Molzahn

On the first occasion, he said, he went to the German Consulate in Philadelphia and asked to be put in touch with men who were aiding in the spread of German propaganda, and was referred to Molzahn as "one of our prominent co-workers."

Molzahn, Father Pelypenko testified, enabled him to get in touch with the German Embassy in Washington and also advised him how Ukranians could help "in the German aims."

At the second meeting, Father Pelypenko testified, he showed the clergyman a letter he had received from Kunze, whom he had met in the meantime, which bore Molzahn's initials and address as a return address.

Called Kunze 'a Good Man'

The clergyman, continued the witness, referred to Kunze as "a good man" but also "a dunce" because he was "not very careful" in the matter of the return address.

Kunze, Anastase A. Vonsiatsky, a Russian Fascist leader from Thompson; Dr. Otto Willumeit, Chicago Bund leader, and Dr. Wolfgang Ebell of El Paso, Tex., were indicted with Molzahn on a charge of conspiracy to violate the 1917 espionage act by collecting United States military information and delivering it to Germany and Japan. Kunze was the messenger who would carry the information by way of Mexico, the indictment charged. All the accused excepting Molzahn pleaded guilty.

Father Pelypenko said he discussed Kunzez's proposed trip to Mexico with Molzahn and that the pastor told him he had received a letter from Kunze about the matter "and did what he could."

Seven Plead Not Guilty In Morale Plot

Seven men accused of conspiring to weaken the Army and Navy's morale pleaded not guilty before Justice James W. Morris in the District Court yesterday.

The arraignment was interrupted by a test air raid alarm.

Those who pleaded not guilty were George Sylvester Viereck, jailed German agent; his henchman, Prescott Dennett, who appeared in Army uniform; Elmer J. Garner, 78, and his son, James F. Garner, 48, publishers of the seditious paper, Publicity; James C. True, Washington; Oscar Brumback, Washington, and Charles B. Hudson, Omaha, Nebr.

Ralph Townsend, Japanese agent who is under an 8- to 24-month prison sentence, said he wanted to talk to a lawyer before he entered his plea.

The men were among 28 persons indicted for conspiracy last week. Special Prosecutors William Power Maloney and John T. M. Reddan said they would press for an early trial, suggesting October 7.

Among the absent defendants was William Dudley Pelley, once chief of the Silver Shirts.

Former Silver Shirts Testify Against Pelley

Indianapolis, July 30 (AP).—The Government called a procession of former members of the Silver Shirts of America to the witness chair today and offered voluminous documentary evidence in building its case against William Dudley Pelley, founder of the organization, who is on trial on sedition charges.

The witnesses were questioned about the Pelley program, which the prosecution outlined yesterday as calling for segragation of Jews adoption of southern Negroes as "wards of the republic" and "ejection" of "the Sephardic Jew, Franklin D. Roosevelt," from the presidency. ("Sephardim" is a Hebrew term for north African, Spanish or Portuguese Jews or their descendants.)

Oscar R. Ewing, special prosecutor, said the Government might conclude its case tomorrow, much earlier than he had expected. On trial with Pelley are Miss Agnes Marian Henderson, his secretary, and Lawrence A. Brown, both associated with him in his publishing firm.

Royall, True to Oath, Defended Spies With All His Legal Skill

Kenneth Claiborne Royall has worn the uniform of the Army of the United States in two great battles for democracy.

The first was in France 25 years ago, where he went into action as a lieutenant of the 317th Field Artillery, Eighty-first Division.

The second was in Washington this week, at the bar of the Supreme Court, where Royal pleaded for two days for the doctrine that America's Bill of Rights is a law for rulers as well as for people, in war as in peace, and covers with the shield of its protection all classes of men, at all times, under all circumstances.

Even German spies, said Royall, who was called into active service as a colonel two months ago.

Colonel Royall did not choose the spies for his clients. His commander in chief, the President, ordered him to defend them with all his legal skill, by every lawful means. Royall and his colleague, Col. Cassius M. Dowell, under their oath, found themselves obliged to assert that the President was in violation of the Constitution when he ordered the spies to the summary justice of a military tribunal.

Born in Coldsboro, N. C., Colonel Royall attended the Episcopal High School in Alexandria, Va., received his B. A. at the University of North Carolina and graduated from Harvard Law School.

He went to the war instead of to the bar, but came back two years later with a wound stripe and opened an office in Raleigh. He became president of the North Caroline Bar Association and when he joined the service Royall, Gosney & Smith was one of the leading firms of the State.

There is another Kenneth C. Royall in uniform, the colonel's son, who is a Marine lieutenant.

Diana Barrymore Is Wed to Actor, Bramwell Fletcher

Hollywood, July 30 (AP).—A backstage romance that began three years ago culminated today in the marriage of Diana Barrymore, 21-year-old daughter of John Barrymore, to Bramwell Fletcher, 38, actor.

The ceremony took place at noon in the bride's home with her mother, Mrs. Harrison Tweed of Long Island as her attendant. Antonio Sylva, an old friend, was best man.

The Rev. H. Paul Romeis, who recently married Barbara Hutton and Cary Grant, officiated.

The newlyweds left by plane for San Francisco.

It's name—"Nightmare."

Ousted Naturalization Aide Sues Biddle for Reinstatement

Because he suspects that his dismissal from a Civil Service position arose out of his refusal to approve the citizenship applications of "two pro-Nazi German aliens," a former New York naturalization examiner filed a suit against Attorney General Francis M. Biddle in District Court yesterday demanding that Biddle be forced to reinstate him.

Complainant in the action is Stanley H. Borack of New York, who charged in the petition that a superior officer had "wrongfully discriminated" against him in recommending his removal from the $2600-a-year position.

Borack did not question the officer's loyalty to the United States. But in a letter July 16 to C. W. Palmer, special assistant to the Attorney General, he ventured that an investigation would reveal that his "conscientious unwillingness to unconditionally approve" the Germans' applications had been one of the factors responsible for his dismissal.

The petition was filed by Borack in his own behalf. He said he was a member of the New York bar and had been appointed to the New York City office of the Immigration and Naturalization Service after passing a competitive examination in 1940. He had already served more than the six-month probationary period, the petition stated, and his dismissal, therefore, was "wrongful, unjust and illegal."

In answer to queries as to the reasons for the ouster, a letter from his employing office stated that a superior officer had reported that the quality of his work had been "below the general standard," and that he had "displayed no aptitude in the performance of the work of a naturalization examiner."

Borack claims that he was not given opportunity to appeal his efficiency rating to the review board of the Civil Service Commission. His work had been classified as "unsatisfactory," but he felt, he said, that he deserved a rating of "good" or better.

Spy Trial Will Go On Despite Court Appeal

Changed Conditions Cited

Biddle declared that the cases in which these principles were declared were based upon the conditions of other wars, and might have been right in 1866. But today, he said, the United States is engaged in a total war, in which the battle zone reaches across the sea, along the whole East Coast and far into the interior.

And the supreme authority of the President, said Biddle, reaches just as far as the realities of total war.

"If the President violated the law while acting as Commander in Chief," Justice Jackson asked Biddle, "would the court have anything to say about it?"

"No," said the President's chief legal adviser, slowly and clearly. "The Commander in Chief is the final authority."

The Supreme Court has been hearing argument upon whether the spies may file their petitions for habeas corpus, or whether the applications must be turned back, as directed by the President's decree which denies enemies access to the courts.

That the Government should be willing to appear and debate this did not imply any acknowledgement of the superior authority of the court. However, if the court let the petitions be filed, the writs of habeas corpus would be issued immediately.

The writs would call upon the President's subordinate, Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, provost marshal of the military district of Washington, to produce the seven prisoners before the Supreme Court and justify his right to hold them.

If Cox should obey, it was considered that he would be bound to abide by the court's decision upon his right to have the men in custody.

President Lincoln disregarded many such writs,—one of the staff prosecuting the spies recalled yesterday.

Police Hunt Down Bananas for Ill Child

New York, July 30 (AP).—Brooklyn police hunted today on foot, in radio cars and by telephone for ripe bananas to aid an ailing child—and came up with 24.

The police had been called in by Mrs. Mitchell Gottlieb, who said she could find no bananas, of which there is a shortage due to the U-boat campaign against shipping, to feed her child, Helene, 15 months old. The child is suffering from celiac, an infant disease best treated by a diet of the tropical fruit.

After a widespread search, a policeman on telephone duty located a wholesaler who had eight edible bananas. These were picked up in a radio car and rushed to the Gottlieb home. Sixteen more bananas, which turned up later, also got a ride in a radio car.

About 200 children in the city have celiac. Last week 25 pounds of bananas were flown from New York to Montreal to aid celiac-stricken Margo Bradley, 22 months old.

The United Fruit Co. said it would make every effort to supply bananas to celiac cases. When consigned to sufferers of the disease, the company said, bananas will receive priority shipment. A banana powder substitute can be used if necessary, it was said.

The disease is caused by inability to take fats and carbohydrates.

Roosevelt Plea Ends Strike At Tank Plant

By the Associated Press

Berwick, Pa., July 31 (Friday).—The midnight shift of maintenance workers at the tank-producing American Car & Foundry Co. plant returned to work today, ending a two-day strike at the telephoned request of President Roosevelt.

Roy Constine, district director of the United Steel Workers Union (C. I. O.), said others of the 1000 strikers would return with later shifts.

The President's appeal, Constine said, was telephoned to him through the office of Marvin McIntyre, Presidential Press Secretary, who said it was signed by the Chief Executive.

Constine said President Roosevelt's message "insisted" that the workers return. He quoted it as saying:

". . . . I insist there be an immediate resumption of production pending settlement of your union's dispute with the company by conciliation, mediation, arbitration or other peaceful means and I expect and insist that you do all in your power to end this strike today."

Constine, called to the telephone from a strikers' meeting, returned and read the message, then called for a vote on returning. A few minutes later he announced that a shift would report for work at midnight.

The strike began early yesterday. The workers said they were protesting the dismissal of three fellow-employes.

FBI Probes Blast Fatal to Five at Ohio Powder Plant

Lebanon, Ohio, July 30 (AP).—Powder stored in two small buildings of the King Powder Co. plant at Kings Mills exploded today, killed five men, injured ten, splintered four other shacks and shook the countryside for 30 miles.

FBI agents began an investigation, closed the property even to State police and withheld details.

The Cincinnati Ordnance District estimated damage at $25,000 and said the cause of the blast was not known.

The blasted powder was for commercial use, company sources said. The explosion was the second within three weeks.

Stilwell's Retreat From Burma to India

GENERAL STILLWELL works on his tommygun near Nomalin, Burma

General Stilwell's successful retreat from Burma to India is graphically presented in this series of photos, just arrived from India

The high-lights of the gruelling 140 miles trek are depicted as the General, at the head of his band of 114 Americans, Burmese nurses, Chinese, Indians, Britons and Anglo-Indians, took the only available trucks and jeeps with what supplies they had, and proceeded from Wuntho, Burma, on May 4, 1942, on one of the most dramatic journeys recorded in the annals of the war thus far

For days the band struggled throug malaria-infested swamps and jungle h the torturous heat of the dense s of Burma, to reach the banks of the Uyu River, where they were forced to abandon their transportation in favor of the time honored 'shanks-mare' mode of travel

Ordered to "drop 'everything' except what you can carry," the small band made rafts with thatch coverings toward off the terrific heat which was "almost beyond endurance," and proceeded down the Uyu River to the Chindwin

Once, a British plane dropped food to the group as they trudged their way westward toward Imphal, on the Indian frontier and, here, after an arduous 20-day trek through the wildest kind of unsurveyed territory, they finally arrived

1. STYMIED BY A STALLED TRUCK in a Chinese troop convoy, the Stilwell group, including Burmese nurses, British, Indian and refugees, lost no time in getting it started again. Chinese push the truck on a one-lane roadway while Lieut. Col. Frank Dorn walks up to investigate

2. A CHINESE TROOP TRUCK broke through an improvised bridge on the Chaunggyi River, holding up the Stillwell convoy again. Col. William H. Holcomb looks the situation over. An offer to get the bridge fixed brought a great burst of speed from the Chinese soldiers

3. THE BRIDGE WAS REPAIRED by the Chinese and Maj. Gen. Franklin C. Sibert runs off ahead of the first American jeep to cross

4. HERE'S ONE OF THE REASONS why the motor transport was abandoned. A staff car, high and dry, on a bullock trail

5 THE BAGGAGE TRUCK caught fire and ammunition was flying about when this picture was made

6. ORDERED TO DROP EVERYTHING "except what you can carry," Capt. John H. Grindlay and Maj. Donald M. O'Hara discard their clothing

"FOUR-KEYBOARDS" ON PLATTERS. The Neptune Room's awe-inspiring and truly novel "Four Keyboard Orchestra," launched only a few weeks ago, is already the subject of heated bidding from major recording companies. We've an idea that the "Four Keyboards" will soon be cutting platters for Decca. Frank Romer, Neptune's ever accurate publicist, asserts that the unit is the world's first real keyboard orchestra. The group includes Arlo Hults, whose novachord supplies strings, horns and reeds; Collins Driggs at the electric organ for bass, Bob and Bertie Hellman, whose concert grand pianos offer percussion effects.

That was no mirage you saw of a girl in a platinum fox jacket on Thirteenth Street on the week's hottest day. It was Kathleen Quinn, who sings with Little Jack Little. Kathleen who spends all her time in El Patio and her hotel, both air conditioned, thinks the heat wave was just an enemy rumor.

WHITE HOUSE WEDDING MUSICIANS. Washington musicians who played in the Meyer Davis Orchestra at the wedding of the Harry Hopkins' included Violinist Michael Weiner, who leads the Sunday gypsy music concerts at the Broadmoor; Violinist Durward Bowersox, whom you can hear every evening at Burt's Trans-Lux; Bassist Bob Staszny, who used to hold forth at the Plymouth; Cellist Alden Finckel and Accordionist Wally Taylor.

RAVAZZA RATES RAVE. Sleek and glowing as a string of pearls is the dance music of Carl Ravazza's Orchestra, Del Rio's newest attraction. There are plenty of violins for sweetness, smartly swinging clarinets and trumpets for hot accents. Fancy arrangements and glee club vocals give added diversion value. Maestro Ravazza, tall, dark, handsome and handy, is more than a goodlooking "front" for his orchestra. He sings takingly, seemed to be accumulating Washington fans at his first session.

Very young but terrifically smart are Phil and Alice, newcomers at Restaurant "400." They'll play and sing anything you desire. But you'll be doing yourself a good turn if you ask them for Enesco's "Rumanian Rhapsody."

"BICYCLE BREAKFASTS" are the latest inspiration of active-minded Roy Risk, manager of Hotel 2400 Sixteenth Street. Sunday hotel breakfasts, English or Southern style, have been popular for some seasons. But with gas what it is, Manager Risk figures that "bicycle breakfasts" with guests arriving under their own power, will be the proper caper for 1942 Sunday mornings. A group of diplomats is cooperating with him in the idea and "bicycle breakfasts," combining exercise, good company and quantities of fine food, will be a "2400" innovation in a few weeks.

CAMERA GIRL CHAIN. Remember Adolph, the black browed, who used to take your order with such celerity at the Madrillon and whom you'd see later fooling around with a camera? Later he popped up at Mayfair taking pictures but not taking orders. And now we find that Adolph has had an inspiration, is training and hiring pretty girls to take pictures of guests in various niteries. If you have your picture taken at the Starlight Roof, the new Dubonnet Room or Mayfair, it'll be whisked off to Adolph's dark room, where he'll do his darnedest to make it a good one. Adolph rates his success. When he was at the Madrillon he spent his time off hunting pictures with news angles. He often sold 'em, too.

CAROL JAMES, lovely lark with Ralph Hawkins' band at the Cross-roads

Jack Coffey, ebullient and able young maestro at Uline's Summer Garden, is going to celebrate with a press party on Saturday midnight. Loads of new tables have been added at Uline's in the hope that there'll be room enough for all this weekend.

STAFF GAZETTE. Merry-Land's Al Norton will have a new role on Sunday. He's to act as godfather for the baby daughter of Clem Mitchell, Merry-Land's mixer. It's a house romance at the Rainbow Room. Margaret Pugliese, the pretty check girl, and Leon Bocek, the little blond waiter, will be married at St. Gabriel's on Sunday. The Rainbow Room and staff are chipping in for a handsome present . . . Romance is scoring again at the Hi Hat, where Denny Calvert, asisstant to Manager Oscar, finally admits that he is planning to marry in December. We don't know anything about the object of his affections except that she's a pretty brunette named Helen.

TICKY BOO. Ray Kinney's limpid vocaling of "Sing Me a Song of the Islands" in the Victory Room while the Aloha Maids weave a web of hula steps . . . You'll also find a lovely hula on the Shoreham Terrace where Marianne Cude of Texas dances as though she were born in Tahiti . . . Like a pair of gorgeous tropical birds are Lotus' Pan-Am dancers, Lao and Monsita, in their huge ruffled costumes . . . For a sip of serenity, listen to Eve Knight of the King Cole Room sing "Solitude." Robert Gabriel, discriminating proprietor of La Salle du Bois, was among her listeners the other evening . . . For cool relaxation try an evening at River Bend where you can always see the stars . . . For jive that boils up like a kettle of apple butter drop into the Louisiana where Ray King's band is bouncing the swing this weekend . . . "Stardust" seems starrier than ever when Trumpeter Sparty Donato and Violinist Johnny Shaw play a chorus of it in the Mayflower Lounge . . . The "Jersey Bounce" becomes a picture as well as a number when you see the Glen Echo jitterbugs go mad to its rhythm as played a la Paul Kain . . . Delta rhythm and open air dancing! What a combination! You'll find it at the Log Tavern with Paul Perkins' Bayou Band . . . Or could it be that you just want to sit quietly and gobble Southern fried chicken? And corn sticks? Then you'd better drop into the Burlington Coffee Shop . . . A person who never lets the heat get him down is Lee Ross now in the Casino Royal revue. He juggles Indian clubs and does a tap dance at the same time.

Art in sculpture and cookery is combined in the culinary exhibit you'll find at Olmsted's today, their second "Friday Fish Fete." Sea food sculptured in ice will vie for attention with edible delicacies from the ocean.

House Backs Bill to Simplify Tax Sale Cases

The House yesterday gave its approval to a pair of District bills, establishing a simplified procedure in the redeeming of tax certificates against local property and providing a jail sentence for indecent exposure.

Passage of the tax sales bill was threatened momentarily when Representaive Rankin (Democrat) of Mississippi objected to the rate of interest levied by the bill on the certificates. He later withdrew his opposition, but expressed hope that the Senate District Committee would lower these rates.

The bill provides for an interest rate of 1 per cent a month for the first two years the certificates are outstanding, and 6 per cent a year thereafter.

The principal provision of the bill is a section permitting property owners to deal directly with the District tax collector in redeeming certificates against their property.

Under present law, they must make the transaction with the purchaser of their certificates. In many cases, the purchasers cannot be located, with the result that many property owners have never been able to clear the title to their land even though they were able to pay off the certificates.

The indecent exposure bill would provide a sentence of 90 days in jail or a $250 fine. Only the latter can be given a defendant at present.

Garfield Hospital Gets 'Iron Lung' From Steel Union

An "iron lung" was presented to Garfield Hospital by the Reinforced Concrete Steel Workers Union, Local 201, A. F. L., in a ceremony in the superintendent's office of the hospital yesterday.

William R. Castle of the board of directors of the hospital accepted the gift from Arthur G. Crory, business representative of the union, and handed it over to Dr. F. J. Eisenman, hospital superintendent. George F. Dube, president of the union, was also present.

Although other hospitals in Washington have artificial respirators, this apparatus is a new type and accommodates two children at the same time.

The union decided to purchase the "iron lung" when one of its members was struck by infantile paralysis and was brought to Garfield Hospital for treatment. A voluntary collection among members raised $1600 for the apparatus. Its use will be available for infantile paralysis victims without charge, the union announced.

Martha Raye 'Steals' Bill Current at Loew's Capitol

Faced With Keen Competition on Stage, Volatile Comedienne Tops Associates And Overshadows the Screen Feature

"JACKASS MAIL." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a story by C. Gardner Sullivan, adapted to the screen by Lawrence Hazard, starring Wallace Beery with Marjorie Main, J. Carroll Naish, Darryl Hickman, William Haade, Dick Curtis, Hobart Cavanaugh, Joe Yule, Louis Mason and Joe Whitehead. Directed by Norman Z. McLeod. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

MR. BEERY AND MISS MAIN, of course, have their following—even in an epic of the California of 1851 justifying the title of "Jackass Mail"—but it must have been the presence on the stage of the volcanic Miss Martha Raye that packed Loew's Capitol to capacity at yesterday's first performance. If so, the customers got their money's worth. Miss Raye was in fine form and high fettle and never let her audience down.

MARTHA RAYE

This is something a little more than the ordinary tribute to the hoyden's unquestioned ability to run away with any bill upon which she appears, since this time around she is faced by some exceedingly stiff competition. Every act in her unit is not only a potential but an actual knocker-outer. Not new to Washington, but always dynamite on a local rostrum, the Condos Brothers, whose dancing is something super-special, and Steve Evans, one of the upperbracket character comedians, walk off with the patrons neatly tucked in their pockets—until the volatile Martha comes along and Rayeses their ante to demonstrate what a real ovation can be like. She accomplishes this sizable tour de force by no method of ladylike decorum or ingenuous approach. She just steams out there and begins punching with everything she's got—which is a considerable equipment.

If her favorite songs—like the "Paganini" number—and high-voltage quips seem to be going not quite well enough to satisfy her, she tears her hat to tatters, kicks her slippers into the orchestra pit and otherwise demolishes herself until it comes time to go into her dance. By the time she is through, it is the crowd out front that is demolished, leaving the Raye serene in the consciousness of a joyful job completely and devastatingly done.

Those Condos Brothers, as everybody must know by now, are extraordinary individual tap dancers, but the marvel of their work lies in the perfection of their precision as a team. Their routines are amazingly fast and intricate and could be disastrously broken up by the slightest slip on the part of either one. The point is, neither one ever makes a slip. As for Steve Evans, he is still doing the Scandinavian drunk, with more catastrophic effect than ever, and varying it with a contagious examination of the various kinds of laughter that emanate from a theater audience when its risibilities are properly provoked. There is also a little monologuing thrown in for good measure and the threadbare and highly inappropriate travesty of Il Duce, the Muss, making a speech, happily is omitted. Add to all this the scintillant sopranoing of Lynn Allison and the spirited cavortings of the refreshed Rhythm Rockets, just back from vacation, with Sam Jack Kaufman's Orchestra on stage, and you have quite a bill on the living side of the entertainment.

In the Well-Worn Groove

"Jackass Mail," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer business on the screen, can best be described as a rough-hewn, low-comedy "The Great Man's Lady." It is preponderantly dedicated to Wallace Beery's conspicuously stylized idiosyncasies, strongly fortified by Miss Main's acidulous termiganting, J. Carroll Naish's drollery as a native-born Italian road agent, by the name of O'Sullivan, and the sentimental charm of Master Darryl Hickman, in the role of a youth getting a little the worst of the deal from life.

Miss Main is a California pioneeress of the vintage of 1851, who operates the mail route into Sacramento from the wayside settlement that in time comes to be known as Baggott City. Mr. Baggott, in the person of Mr. Beery, wanders into the town saloon, bearing the shady reputation of horse thief and robber. A kindred lust for gold creates an immediate affinity between him and Signor O'Sullivan, the bartender. They probably would have done all right for themselves, had not the lady of the "jackass mail" been moved to abandon the life of a dance-hall gal and become the Carrie Nation of the frontier, with rose-tinted dreams of bringing the railroad around that way.

Mr. Baggott being in the ecstacies of the grand passion, so far as Clementine "Tiny" Tucker is concerned, becomes the victim of her most violent reforms and, much against his will and better judgment, winds up as the town's "Mr. Big," highly respected by all who didn't know him.

It is a nice enough burlesque most of the way and will do for those addicted to the unique endowments of its stars.

A Technicolor short subject, "Desert Wonderland," particularly appropriate to this program; a Terrytoon comedy, also in color, "All Out for Victory," carrying the war effort into the insect world with astonishing results on the side of increased war production, and the newsreel complete an entertainment that need stand in no fear of starvation at the box office.

Humphrey Glad to Claim Flier as Kin

Humphrey Bogart has received a letter from the war front.

It came to the Warner Bros. star from George Bogart, a gunner with an air corps squadron in Australia.

Bogart explained on the set of "Across the Pacific" that his correspondent had written because his air corps buddies were continuously asking if the gunner were related to the movie star. The writer wanted to know what the star thought about it.

"Could be," wrote back Humphrey. "And anyway," he added, "I'm willing to claim any guy who is fighting the Japs."

On the Dividing Line!

Hollywood, Calif., July 30. Twentieth Century is negotiating with Paramount for part of Mary Martin's contract. Seems that's getting to be a habit with them. They are already sharing the contracts of Dana Andrews and Virginia Gilmore with Sam Goldwyn, Maureen O'Hara's with RKO, and before they took over the complete rights to Carole Landis and Victor Mature, they'd split them with Hal Roach.

Whoever said Mexicans aren't go-getters? Lupe Cortes, who came up here for RKO's "Seven Days' Leave," is a star and producer in her own country.

She finished at the studio at 4 o'clock last Wednesday afternoon, left by plane for Mexico City at 4 o'clock the next morning, and managed in the interim to read, for the first time, the script on "Midnight Show," her new starring production.

At the airport she filed a four page telegram to Ginny Simms, outlining a swell part in the picture, and Ginny left by plane Saturday night for Mexico City to join the cast.

Ginny, who worked with Mapy in "Seven Days' Leave," is a great favorite with our neighbors below the border, and while down there, Mapy's planning to line up some South American broadcasts for her.

I found Olivia De Havilland doing a charming bed scene in "Princess O'Rourke," and she called over jokingly, "Here I'm waking up in Bob Cummings' bed, wearing his pajamas, and I haven't even met him yet!" But just then Bob showed up, and they were introduced. He tells me he's always admired Olivia and is very excited about his role opposite her.

Says his home life's all but vanished. He is commanding an air patrol unit now, spends all his time, including nights, training and organizing his unit. "But I'm not going to lose my wife in all this," he said. "I've made her my secretary, and she goes along with me." They've even turned their home into a civilian air patrol headquarters.

Paulette Goddard, on the "Crystal Ball" set, looked in full bloom of health and said she'd heard from Diego Rivera's wife recently, who's bought a cattle ranch near Mexico City and intends to become a "cowgirl."

Paulette says Diego's not doing any murals now, merely a few pictures. She has some of his originals on the walls of her dressing room.

Paulette went down to Tia Juana last week to see Sidney Franklin in a bull fight.

Richard Haydn, on "No Time for Love" set, says there was a Jap scare near his beach house the other night. Alarm went out that a Jap boat was near, but it turned out to be a harmless fishing boat looking for a lost net?

The boat eventually found the net, dragged a 60 pound sea bass to shore, and now everyone in his neighborhood's eating fish.

When "Louisiana Purchase" was produced in New York, Mary Healy was being considered for the part that Carol Bruce got. Now the tables are turned, 'cause Mary's going to do the part for which Carol was considered in "Count Me In," the Shubert musical opening this fall.

Loose-Leaf Notebook

New York, July 30.

Before director William Wyler entered the Army, he received a phone-call from Sam Goldwyn. The producer had an idea for a Russian movie, if Wyler and Lillian Hellman could get to Russia "Harry Hopkins could arrange it," said Goldwyn, "if only we knew Hopkins" . . . Wyler said that he knew Hopkins . . . "Really?" said Goldwyn. "How?" . . . "I met him through Herbert Bayard Swope," said Wyler. Goldwyn asked: "And how do you know Swope?" Wyler told him . . . "I'd like to talk to Hopkins about this," said Goldwyn. "See if you can arrange it" . . . Wyler reported this to Hopkins, who suggested: "Have Mr. Goldwyn phone me, at the White House" . . . The director therefore sent a wire to Goldwyn, telling him to phone Harry Hopkins. The next day Goldwyn called Wyler again. "I have great news for you, Willie," he shouted. "Just heard from Hopkins. He wants me to call him."

James D. C. Murray, the noted New York criminal lawyer, probably will defend one of the 28 persons recently indicted by the Washington grand jury . . . Elizabeth Dilling, who was among those indicted, will have her request fulfilled for a hearing in Chicago before she stands trial in Washington . . . Eleanor Roosevelt went to see Irving Berlin's "This Is the Army" the other night. After the performance was over, Mrs. Roosevelt went onstage where the cast still was assembled. Behind the curtain which separated them from the audience, they could hear the music of the orchestra playing the tunes of a democracy. "When your show comes to Washington," said Mrs. Roosevelt, speaking up over the music of the band, "you're all invited for supper at the White House."

For the past ten days the newspapers have devoted much space to the booklet issued to all American soldiers going to England, telling them about that country and offering practical suggestions for getting along there. None of the reports, however, has revealed the name of the author of that booklet . . . He's Howard Haycraft, vice-president of the H. W. Wilson Publishing Co. He's written successful detective stories. He's now with the Army Specialists Corps.

In Bob Hope's forthcoming movie, a camel will face the camera, and in the voice of Katharine Hepburn say to the audience: "This is a wacky picture, isn't it?" . . . Orson Welles will return to the States in three weeks. He now is in Argentina . . . Radio City Music Hall, which still is running "Mrs. Miniver," will follow it with a picture which probably will run through the rest of the summer — Walt Disney's "Bambi" . . . When Sinclair Lewis tires of the rigors of his current writing siege, he relaxes by teaching special courses at the University of Minnesota . . . Garson Kanin, the young, brilliant film director, returns to Army service, as a private, on Saturday. Woollcott met Kanin this week and describes him as "that elderly tot."

Joe Alsop, the Washington columnist who was captured in Hongkong, is one of the Americans now en route home, after the Japanese-American exchange of interned civilians. Alsop, who is related to the President, had resigned his commission in the United States Navy to work for the Chinese government in Chungking. He, of course, expressed great delight at being liberated, but protested against being sent back to America. He wanted the Japs to set him free at the point nearest to his place of capture, the place to which he will return in any event—China.

Helen Hayes was serving the hamburgers at the new Times Square Canteen for Service Men. She studied the enthusiastic soldiers waiting in line and said: "I guess this is my most popular role yet" . . . Howard Smith, the drummer in Alex Pierce's band at the Latin Quarter, is playing there now using only one hand. He fractured his wrist when he fell off the bandstand. His hand is now in a splint—but the drummer still is working . . . Gregory Ratoff, who directed a movie adapted from a European-made film, was dissatisfied with the finished job. He decided to inspect the original European film to see what was lost in the transition. He discovered that his specially hired dialogue writers merely had copied the English titles.

Japs Tough, Willing, Says Ex-Flying Tiger

These charming stories about the Jap pilot's inability to see at night or shoot accurately and about his lack of courage were seriously discounted yesterday by Robert Prescott, who fought over China for a year with the American Volunteer Group.

Stopping in town, via England, to see his brother, Luther D. Prescott, of 104 George Mason Drive, Arlington, Va., an attorney with hte RFC, Prescott smiled ironically and said, "We all believed the Jap would be something of a pushover until we got in the air against him, and then it was a sadly different story. Those boys are tough, willing and comparable to the Americans and the R. A. F."

Pensacola Graduate

A graduate of the Navy's Pensacola (Fla.) air base, Prescott spoke like the man "who looked so wistfully at the sky" when he told of his first encounter with the enemy in the Burma area. "About seven of us took off the first morning after a group of Jap pursuit and bomber planes," he said.

"The enemy was flying about 8000 feet and we raced up after them like a bunch of mad goslings, stupidly violating all the rules we had learned at flying school. Before we knew it the Japs 'fell to' pretty damned quickly and expertly. We broke formation and I dived away at such speed that I thought I was floating when I pulled up at 300 miles per hour. After that we took heed."

Asked why Americans accounted for so many more planes than the Japs, he pointed out that that disproportionate tally was in many respects due to the superior fighting equipment of the American and other pilots, and not, as far as he could see, due to the Japs' bad piloting or fighting.

Accuracy Improved

"I am fairly sure, however, that many of the bomber squadrons of the Japs were led either by Germans or highly trained men of their own race, because their bombing accuracy improved painfully after a few months of our entrance into the war," he said. "And don't let anybody tell you that the Japanese Zero fighter planes are "shoe-string and glue machines," because it's just so much nonsense. They are armor plated, highly maneuverable and manned by the best."

Prescott, who is credited with six Jap planes, paid tribute to the courage of the Jap men on the airfields. "They are the only ones who will attempt to take to the air while the field is being attacked," he asserted.

Undecided as to the future, Pilot Prescott said he would return to his native Fort Worth, Tex., for a few weeks and then "maybe some more action." The A. V. G. disbanded July 4.

Great Lakes Side-Wheeler Becomes Plane Carrier

50,000 More Than Usual Must Go to College, Says Elliott

By some "one of many ways," the War Manpower Commission must get into American colleges this autumn 50,000 more students than ordinarily would be enrolled, Dr. Edward Elliott declared yesterday.

Dr. Elliott, former president of Purdue University, who is in charge of the technical and professional supply and training branch of the commission, has been given the additional job of heading a committee that will "guarantee to colleges a continuing supply of engineers, chemists, physicists and other scientific and professional personnel required in the war program."

Working with him to formulate the program, which will mean a much larger Government subsidy of higher education than ever has been undertaken before in this country will be: James B. Forrestal, Undersecretary of the Navy; Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of Selective Service; G. H. Dorr, special assistant to the Secretary of War; Arthur S. Fleming, member of the Civil Service Commission, and Wendell Lund, of the labor supply division of WPB.

Dr. Elliott declared neither the Army Reserve nor Navy Reserve college programs were working out satisfactorily, that an Industrial Reserve in which to train leaders for war production was needed, and that the economic gap keeping bright students out of college must be bridged "somehow."

He said he could visualize a program that would cost "anything from three million dollars to 300 million dollars" and that he was certain at the beginning that anything finally decided upon would bring some criticism.

"But everyone knows we have got to utilize our schools in a more efficient manner," he declared. "The Army and Navy must have first call on the enrollment, but there must be an efficient use of those left over."

An admitted weakness in the Navy college program for getting officers, he said, was that after a boy has been trained for two years, he still could be screened out and then automatically becomes an enlisted sailor.

"In the colleges we have, in my estimation, the greatest untapped pool of man power in the country. Ordinarily a million or more young people are enrolled in our higher institutions of learning, about two-thirds of them men and one-third women.

"Others can estimate the length of the war as they please, of course, but we must plan for a long war. And my personal convictions are we will have a long war," he declared.

Other than Army and Navy funds, the only Government money available for college training now is five million dollars set aside recently as a student loan fund. The loan is wiped out when and if the recipient joins the armed forces. The 30 million dollars available for training in ESMWT (engineering, science, management, war training) courses goes, for the most part into in-training programs set up inside or for specific war production plants.

Asked whether the complete plan of his committee would be in working order by the opening of school in September, Dr. Elliott declared: "If it is ready by January 1 I'll think the angels themselves have been busy on it!"

Jet Wins Over Spray as Firebomb Combat Method

New York, July 30 (U.P.).—The battle of jet versus the spray as a means of discouraging an incendiary bomb was settled tonight in favor of the jet in a public demonstration which gave Civilian Defense Director James M. Landis a decision over his feuding predecessor, Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia.

The test, conducted in Randalls Island Stadium by Army Chemical Warfare experts, was thorough and conclusive. The water jet won in 15 seconds flat, with 3 quarts of water. The spray was a poor second with 65 seconds and 2 gallons of water.

D. C. Area Quotas For Tea, Coffee Increased 25%

A 25 per cent increase in tea and coffee quotas for the District, Montgomery and Prince Georges counties in Maryland and Arlington County in Virginia was announced yesterday by the War Production Board. The new quotas go into effect Saturday and remain in effect unless otherwise ordered.

The order means that the monthly quota for tea in Washington and the adjoining counties has been raised from 50 to 62.5 per cent for tea and for coffee from 75 to 93.75 per cent. The percentages are based on average monthly deliveries of tea and coffee during the third quarter of 1941.

Quota increases ranging from 100 per cent were announced for 204 counties in 42 States.

London, July 30 (A.P.).—Crown Princess Martha of Norway, who has been living in Maryland, has flown to Britain to join the London celebrations of King Haakon's birthday, August 3.

N. M. Attorney General Indicted in Bribery Case

Santa Fe, N. Mex., July 30 (A.P.).—E. P. Chase, New Mexico attorney general, was indicted on a charge of bribery late today by a county grand jury investigating State affairs.

District Judge David Chavez, jr., set bond at $500.

District Attorney David Carmody said the indictment charged the attorney general with accepting a fee for writing an official opinion.

All Britons Abroad Urged To Return Home for War Work

All British subjects abroad have been urged to return to the United Kingdom "unless they are engaged in vitally important work in the country in which they now are living."

They are needed at home to meet "a serious shortage of man power," according to a bulletin released yesterday to explain how they can secure free passage and to outline the classifications in which the greatest shortages exist.

Both men and women are needed in both military and civilian occupations, according to the bulletin.

Girls under 20 years of age, however, must make arrangements to travel with women friends who would act as chaperons. Eighteen is the lowest age at which they would be accepted.

A Second Front—NOW!

AMERICA IS IN DANGER. Recent critical developments on our Russian Front threaten the safety of America. Rostov has fallen. The German Fascists are approaching the Caucasus with its rich oil fields. If these fall into Hitler's hands, the war will be prolonged for many years. Axis domination of the Soviet Union and the entire European continent will mean defeat and slavery for all the United Nations, INCLUDING THE UNITED STATES.

SUPPORT OUR COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF. The CIO wholeheartedly supports President Roosevelt's program to defeat Hitler and his Axis partners. We commend the Pact and Agreement reached between the United States, Great Britain and the Soviet Union to OPEN A SECOND FRONT IN 1942.

ATTACKS ON GERMAN CITIES by thousands of bombers have not diverted ANY of Hitler's forces from the Russian Front. Air raids alone are NOT enough! An immediate LAND attack in Europe is needed to do the job.

ACTION NOW. A Second Front is no longer a risk. It is a necessity. It is a matter of life and death. We can, we must crush Hitler and his hordes. Strike NOW in the West! Senator Pepper says, "It is not a question of how, but NOW. We face a greater danger by inaction than by any action we can take."

FOR FREEDOM, OPEN A SECOND FRONT NOW AND ASSURE VICTORY IN 1942.

Parachute Boats

The public emphasis in building fighter planes has been so much on speed, maneuverability and firepower, that most of us have tended to ignore the accompanying development of safety measures to protect fighter pilots. To be sure, to our layman mind a very good case can be made out for the conspicuous lack of safety in flying and fighting say an Aircobra or a Mustang. But pilot protection has nevertheless been quite a factor in fighter design and equipment—i. e., armor around cockpits, parachutes, lifebelts, and so on.

In this connection it is worth noting that many of our fighter pilots may soon sit on a compact bundle that is nothing less than an inflatable rubber boat containing paddles, a pump, plugs to stop bullet holes, a bailing cup, a sea anchor, a can of water and a sea marker to attract the attention of rescuers. Some of these items are, of course, collapsible. The boat and its equipment weigh only 12 pounds, it is said, and are attached to the pilot's parachute. Thus, the pilot who bails out of his plane and reaches the water safely possesses a seagoing craft that can be released and inflated in less than 10 seconds.

If this all seems too ingenious to be practical, it should be pointed out that Army and Navy officers, witnessing tests of the boat, have expressed their approval. As is well known, larger rubber boats are standard equipment in bombers and patrol planes operating over large stretches of water, and have demonstrated their usefulness. Obviously, if the parachute boat proves to be anywhere near as useful, and does not in any way hamper combat performance, it will be a welcome addition to the relatively few protective devices that guard the fighter pilot.

Senator Byrd's Axe

The record of the Congressional Joint Committee on Reduction of Nonessential Federal Expenditures is one of which the committee as a whole, and its chairman, Senator Byrd, in particular, may well feel proud. The committee modestly—and properly—refuses to take sole credit for the economies effected. But the close correspondence between the cuts which it recommended in various outlays and the reductions in appropriations voted by Congress is certainly not pure accident.

The publicity given to committee hearings called to inquire into the activities of various relief agencies paved the way for really substantial reductions in work relief appropriations. If the white light of publicity had not been thrown on these emergency agencies by the committee, it is highly improbable that Congress would have gone as far as it did in curtailment of outlays. As it was, Congress gave the Farm Security Administration, recommended for abolishment, a new lease on life and authorized it to borrow nearly 100 million dollars from the RFC. Congress likewise voted funds for rivers and harbors, flood control, etc., in excess of appropriations for the 1942 fiscal year, in disregard of committee suggestions. On the other hand, cuts in the appropriations for the WPA are expected to effect much larger savings than the Joint Committee had planned for. In the final summing up, therefore, the 1943 appropriations for nonessential purposes show savings of $1,184,000,000, compared with a total of $1,131,000,000 of savings recommended by the committee. Reductions in loan authorizations totaled 130 million dollars compared with the 170 million dollars asked for by the committee.

Although savings of such magnitude would seem tremendous in ordinary times, the committee concludes that the possibilities for economies "have been no more than scratched." Hence it proposes to continue its efforts to reduce nonessential Federal spending. The committee has already acquired a lot of valuable information concerning defects of administration, duplication of effort, and excessive overhead costs of the executive establishments. Its researches should, therefore, aid the more efficient organization as well as the more economical administration of Government agencies.

The next step, it appears, will be an investigation of "the activities, practices and expenditures of the so-called defense and war agencies." The use of that word "so-called" indicates that the committee is prepared to challenge the status of many self-styled defense agencies carrying on activities that are only tenuously connected with the war effort. The committee realized that it would have interfered with the war effort to have conducted a probe of bona fide war agencies while they were in process of being built up. However, the war effort will be hindered, not helped, by permitting such agencies too much leeway, now that they are fairly well established. With instances of waste and misdirection of effort becoming increasingly obtrusive, the need for some external checks upon war spending becomes increasingly apparent. The committee has recognized that necessity and given notice of intention to extend the scope of its inquiry.

Habeas Corpus

On Wednesday, as the Supreme Court of the United States met in extraordinary session to examine the petition for writs of habeas corpus filed on behalf of seven of the Nazi saboteurs who had been landed on our shores from German submarines, firing squads were busy all over Europe. Frenchmen, Netherlanders, Yugoslavs, Norwegians, Russians and others were being executed at the whim of the conquerors. This has been going on for years, and the number of victims runs into a staggering total.

These victims were convicted without regard to constitutional rights, without benefit of "due process," "habeas corpus" and the other safeguards with which those accused of crimes are surrounded in civilized countries. A large number of them were executed without even having been accused of a crime. They were shot as hostages or because of what members of their families or their friends had done or simply because the conquerors wanted to terrorize the population. It is only too obvious what the Nazis would do to eight American saboteurs caught after being landed on German soil by submarine.

But the Nazi way is not our way. The Nazis kill because they are obsessed by gnawing fear, because they have no confidence in the capacity of their institutions to win popular consent and because they are brutes of the lowest order. But Americans have faith in their institutions, confidence in their inherent strength. Even in as desperate a crisis as that which faces our Nation and other free nations today, we do not propose to imitate the enemy, but only to act in accordance with the precepts of law and right. For that reason there is an element of the sublime in the action of Chief Justice Stone in calling this extraordinary session of the court.

It is quite possible that after hearing the plea of the military officers who had been assigned to defend the saboteurs and who have been doing their sworn duty to leave no stone unturned in seeing to it that full justice is done to the accused, the Court may turn down the petition. But the very circumstance that the Court is meeting to hear the petition—this after a long and exhaustive trial of the men by a military commission—shows that the saboteurs are being given their day in court.

To say that these saboteurs do not deserve such punctilious treatment—that, instead, they deserve only to be placed against a wall before a firing squad and as quickly as possible—is altogether beside the point. It is not their liberties which are involved in the elaborate precautions that have been taken to see that they got a fair trial, but ours. It is not the fate of these despicable agents of a brutalitarian state which matters much, but the fate of our institutions. In a time when in so many parts of the world law has become a mockery and justice an obscenity it will hearten free men everywhere that here in this citadel of liberty law and justice still function—even for the benefit of those who surreptitiously invaded our land to do us injury.

Bushido Again

The latest edition of the magazine Free World contains an article by the Attorney General, Mr. Francis Biddle, on the necessity of justice and humanity in dealing with persons classified as "enemy aliens." Mr. Biddle urges us to distinguish carefully between sheep and goats, between those subjects of Axis governments who are actually friendly or harmless and those who are actively or potentially Fifth Columnists. As to the former group, he would have us remove "any vestiges of blind prejudice" and to "broaden their job opportunities." The article, in short, is a plea for fairness in the finest American tradition. It is the same tradition which has impelled American defense counsel for some of the Nazi saboteurs to carry an appeal to the Supreme Court.

All the same, it would be well to read Mr. Biddle's plea in conjunction with the testimony of Mr. Otto Tolischus and other eyewitnesses concerning the treatment of American and British civilians by the Japanese Bushido Boys in Tokyo, Yokohama and elsewhere. These accounts of deliberate torture are, to be sure, a little less shocking than the well-authenticated testimonies to the carnival of torture, massacre and rape which followed the Bushido Boys' capture of Hongkong, to say nothing of what happened at Nanking and elsewhere in the captured provinces of China. Nevertheless, they afford a pretty accurate notion of what the tens of thousands of American civilian and military prisoners still in Japanese hands must endure. It is also an earnest of what all of us may expect, if and when Admiral Yamamoto realizes his ambition of dictating the peace from the White House and Premier Tojo his plan of annihilating Britain and America.

That some of the prisoners, whose experiences are described by Mr. Tolischus, were released this side of death or insanity was not due to any sudden access of compassion or compunction on the part of the Bushido Boys. It was "because of the Japanese in the United States," as was stated in so many words. In short, the Bushido Boys had begun to worry about the possibility of reprisals. And here we may have an explanation of something which has been attested by virtually all correspondents, namely, that British captives have, on the whole, fared much worse than Americans. There are very few Japanese nationals in British hands.

It all offers an interesting commentary on Mr. Biddle's solicitude for the innocent Japanese in this country or the State Department's solicitude for the name and person of the Japanese Emperor. We are not, of course, asking them to change their positions. We are certainly not suggesting any reprisal on the Japanese now in our custody, nor asking that some American variant of Bushido be adopted in place of our present lofty and idealistic policies. We are well aware to what lengths the spirit of blind vengeance, if once unleashed, might lead. All we ask is that all of us recognize the nature of the enemy with whom we have to deal.

Case For Clemency

The late Mr. Justice Holmes in his famous work on The Common Law pointed out that the underlying principle in Anglo-Saxon criminal law is precisely the same as in civil law—namely, damages. Indeed, it is only in comparatively recent times that any distinction between civil and criminal law has existed. Thus the main idea is not the reform or ethical rehabilitation of the criminal but tangible recompense for injuries or indignities inflicted. Thus we speak of convicted man's "debt to society" as though it were entirely quantitative and not—as, for example, in acts of public penance—an outward acknowledgment of an inward, spiritual change.

A better illustration of this could hardly be found than the case of Clarence Arters. Twenty-two years ago in Iowa Arters was arrested for having taken a ride without permission in an automobile belonging to somebody else. It was apparently his first and only offense. The damages to the peace and dignity of the State of Iowa were assessed at from one to five years' imprisonment. After serving 13 months Arters escaped from the prison farm, went East, married, and settled down to what Judge Byron A. Milner of Philadelphia has described as "an exemplary life," holding several responsible jobs and raising a family of six children.

He and his family might have continued in this aura of respectability until his death save for the vindictive fate which, some years ago, persuaded him to ship as a cook aboard a fleet of oil tankers operating between Philadelphia and Galveston. With the opening of the German submarine campaign, he became automatically a war hero, risking his life at every voyage. The game was up, however, when the Government began collecting fingerprints. Mr. Arters was, to be sure, no Fifth Columnist nor enemy saboteur. But the State of Iowa, which had utterly forgotten him, became very much interested in him again. So now, aged 55, Mr. Arters is on his way back to prison, where he may have to remain for another 10 years.

There are several pitiful ironies about this case. First, that if Mr. Arters had paid no damages whatever to the State of Iowa, and had escaped before he could be indicted, the statute of limitations would take care of the whole business. Or, if he had escaped immediately after indictment, it is highly doubtful that he would now be remanded for trial. Finally, misfortune and disgrace overtook Mr. Arters only at the moment when he was of the maximum usefulness to his family and his country. It is certainly to be hoped that the Governor of Iowa will look beyond the law to see where manifest justice lies in this case and at once issue a plenary pardon.

OLD FENCE

I found an old fence weathers had derided;
Sun, rain and wind in company. Time too
Had spurned the rough stile thoughtful hands provided
And gone the slow way through.

Rust and decay together had loosed nails
Out of their places, and a long forgotten
Want of repair left even the stoutest rails
Half under foot and rotten.

Clearer than any words the silence spoke
No further need for careful diligence
Where only pastured now such rooted folk
As is no gain to fence.

I fell to wondering whose had been the plan,
And what had stayed or swerved him from his task;
And looked about for sign of house or man,
But there was none to ask.

Letters To The Editor

Doesn't Like Pipes

It was necessary for me to spend a great deal of time for the past four days in the offices of the War Production Board and it was most noticeable that most of the executives are inveterate "pipe smokers."

It just goes to show that in a large organization, whatever "the boss does" trickles down to the bottom.

I worked for a large corporation for many years and pipe smokers were barred—too complacent—too soft and too self-satisfied was the way the head of that organization put it.

I couldn't see it at the time, being too young, but I do verily believe it now.

Are we going to win the war with a barrage of pipe smokers? These boys should be in the front line trenches where the gas from the pipes and smell would lull the enemy into a coma.

One thing I will say—they certainly stink up the air in the Social Security Building.

Maybe they are burning rubber.

Federal Loafers

I feel the urge to reply to D. E. Schmidt's article "Federal Loafers" in today's issue of your paper.

I work in the Internal Revenue Building and have had occasion to be around the building and see what is going on.

Does it seem logical that clerks would be loafing when vacations in numbers of sections are deferred and may not be given because of urgency to get out work?

Whatever Mrs. Schmidt may have seen I am sure she did not understand the circumstances, and has greatly exaggerated.

There are far more women employes than men, and I know of no place where there are rows of offices of just young men alone.

People On Political Profiteering

I have read the editorial displayed on the front page of The Sunday Post. Its sentiments are admirable but I don't quite follow you when you turn it into an attack upon Congress. After all, although I do not hold any brief for our legislators, it seems to me it is only fair to point out that, however much they may disagree over internal details and may squabble about them, they have with a lavish hand appropriated all the money that the men in charge of our war effort could use and they raised the pay of the men in the armed forces.

The main point made by your soldier boy is that we have no planes to follow the Japs to their 30,000-foot Zero ceilings. Well, if I were looking for someone to blame for that I wouldn't turn to Congress. Congress provided the money.

Price ceilings and wages debates are not cramping the efforts of our fighting forces, irritating though they may be to us on the ground. I have a feeling that you boys who criticize Congress for everything are riding toward a reaction. I'm getting a little fed up myself. Enough criticism for them to know the public is watching is a good thing, but unfair criticism, long continued, is finally going to make the people sympathize with Congress and distrust its critics. DISTURBED.

Washington, July 27.

I have always thought that we were the superior inventors of all countries, even including Germany. Why are we following now instead of leading? I could wish that you had developed that thought instead of going off after Congress again. Airplanes are more important to this country now than any other single thing. If we are falling down on the airplanes we are sending to our fliers, everybody should know it, and it is high time that those in charge of our airplane production should change their direction. We have the money and we have the materials. Why are we not getting the planes?

Washington, July 27.

Why do not our boys have the planes they need to fight the Japanese on even terms?

Whose fault is it? Has Congress failed to provide? I did not think Congress had anything to do with the kind of planes.

The people want our boys to have what they need.

Political profiteers! That was a telling phrase and editorial heading in The Washington Post the other day. When the men come back from the Aleutians, Midway, Bataan, Australia and Europe, "political profiteers" may be the epitaph of the Democratic and Republican Parties.

But the fault is ours, the millions of people who are not governmental officeholders. The professional politicians, local magistrates, as well as the President of this country, again and hold their positions by votes, our votes. Officeholding is their profession, and some will squeeze personal, family and party advantage out of each position, as some business and labor leaders vote themselves wealth out of their organizations.

What can an individual person do? Occasionally you and I can write for the letter column of a free press. We can send a thoughtful note on an issue of importance to our Congressman and the President. Someone reads those messages and passes the trend of opinion on to a person concerned. We can discuss the behavior of our Representatives.

And finally we can talk the kind of language the political profiteers understand—we can vote. And we can vote against any candidate for reelection who in this period of war has proved himself unable to put national interests ahead of self and party. If you and I do not write, talk and vote for real democracy, then we cannot complain about the actions of the professional politician.

Colored Aviators

Today China finds herself in a critical position because of the lack of trained airmen desperately needed to stem the devastating sweep of Japanese air power. At the same time, we in this country are deliberately indulging in the luxury of seeing the probability of a Chinese defeat by not permitting over 957 licensed native American pilots to aid China. But what is worse, we ourselves flatly refuse that wealth of capable man power in the building up of our own air strength!

I refer to the untapped reservoir of nearly 1000 licensed colored aviators whose ranks are being rapidly depleted through inductions into regular armed services without having the merest recognition given these airmen's abilities and burning desires to serve their Nation from the gun emplacements of the air. I also refer to all of the thousands of keen, able-bodied, air-minded youths all over the country whose spirits are being tragically crushed by some upstart U. S. Army Air Force "tradition" that not only keeps them from significant service in combat air forces of the United Nations, but which attempts to blast out of account the contributions colored American aviators have been making to the science of air navigation for over 25 years.

Worse than an underestimation of our enemies' strength during a time of war is the underestimation of what groups within our own population can do to win that war. All along the line we have underestimated the abilities and capacities of the Negro within our midst. Our stupid peacetime social estimates of this colored group now completely blind us to the usefulness of this group in our total war effort. By such willful blindness we sabotage our own fight for the Four Freedoms here and throughout the world. Concrete evidence of this kind of sabotage is to be found in the ranks of thousands of colored Americans who are denied air combat training and service despite their positive fitness. DUTTON FERGUSON.

Repeat The Raids

I understand that concern is being felt over the fact that the American public has so far failed to take this war seriously. Why should we? How can we? There are thousands of reasons why we don't and can't. Take, for instance, the raid on Tokyo, a brilliant stunt, brilliantly executed. If it had been repeated all informed observers agree that the effect upon Japanese morale would have been shattering. But do we repeat it? We do not. Every one concerned in it comes home and goes completely Hollywood. In fact, the war as we have been allowed to apprehend it, has been completely Hollywood from the beginning.

Consider, for instance, that disgusting business at Norfolk of a fancy funeral for bloody pirates. In peacetime there would be nothing sinister about this. It would be simply another example of the childlike American longing to put on a show and get your picture in the paper. But in wartime, as a symptom it is sinister. I would suggest that every one connected with the affair be put in solitary confinement for six months, and at the end of that time those who had not died of shame could be inducted into the merchant marine.

The Post Impressionist

Black Sea Adventure

In the days of Abd-ul-Hamid, the last of the real Sultans of Turkey, who had the power of life and death over his subjects, and was a typical Oriental despot, a young American, resident in Constantinople, decided to take an outing through Asia Minor, to a point on the Black Sea. The country through which he was to pass was infested with Circassians, most of them thieves, to say nothing of possible brigands. (As the author of this true story was that young fellow he will now speak in the first person.) So, considering that a revolver was not a sufficient protection, I somewhere bought in Galata (or it may have been Pera) a repeating rifle, which in some respects was a remarkable weapon. It was really in effect a revolver with a rather long barrel. As the carrying of guns by foreigners was prohibited by the Turks, I obtained a special permission—perhaps from some official who had no right to issue one—to carry that rifle. This precious document—which numbers of the officials I met could not read, as it was written in Arabic letters—took me through the customs, and protected me on the train which ran past the Armenian village of Adabazar, near which I alighted, and spent that night with some American friends who there conducted a school for the natives.

The next day, with an Armenian guide, I started on horseback, rifle held across my saddle like a carbine, feeling quite important, and heading straight north toward the little Black Sea town whose name it is just as well to forget. So far nothing had happened, except that my "gun," whether in its brown case or not, excited interest wherever I went, resulting in not a few curious inquiries as to how it worked, or why I carried it. I had a small supply of cartridges with me, but did not delay for target practice—which is perhaps quite fortunate, as the rather antiquated and I fear rusty old contraption might have burst when fired, doing more harm at the breach than at the muzzle.

Toward evening, after a hard ride through a rough country, we came into a small settlement, on the banks of a narrow river which flowed into the Black Sea. Here there was quite an establishment of the Tobacco Regie—an Administration holding a concession from the Turkish Government and controlling the export of tobacco from all over Asia Minor. The first hint of trouble was offered as we rode into the little hamlet, which mostly consisted of storehouses or offices. A burly Turkish officer in uniform eyed us narrowly as we came in. Then, closely following us to the khan were we put up for the night, he demanded my rifle. Yazak (Forbidden!) he said it was and ordered it given over to him.

But my quick-witted young Armenian friend came at once to my rescue. "Hand it over to the khanji!" he whispered. I did so, catching the idea immediately. Property of "guests" while in the custody of the khan-keeper is perfectly free from confiscation or spoliation. Then, sitting cross-legged on the low sofa-like ledge which ran around the edge of the interior of the khan, I had time to collect my thoughts, meanwhile watching attentively my Armenian guide, who was having an up-and-down talk with the big Turkish officer. As it afterward appeared, he represented to the officer that I had a warrant for carrying the gun (though he took pains not to have it shown) that I was a harmless, and at the same time highly estimable, gentleman, that my shadow would never grow less, and that I would soon take my departure back to Stamboul. If he let us alone, we would warmly commend him to the high-up officials of the Regie, at headquarters, but (here was the climax) his excellency (let us call him Halim Bey) would better not molest this American guest, for if he did he would find that the Ambassador of the latter, in high favor with the Sultan, would at once see that dire punishment was visited upon him.

The situation was tense for a few moments. Then Halim Bey, concluding that it would be better to sleep over the matter, withdrew. "He has no right to take the gun," explained the Armenian, "for he is only a Regie man, not a zaptieh (mounted policeman) but he dearly covets it, and in this lonely place may resort to violence to secure it." On the raised platform of the khan, despite the fleas, and the frequent braying of the donkeys, with a saddlebag for a pillow, I slept fairly well, but with my dreams mingled subconsciously the thought, How can I help losing my rifle in the morning? It was a remote and wild place, the will of the officials was supreme, and I was a gaour, or infidel, deserving no consideration. Moreover, my gun was a tempting rifle, though really not so good a one as it looked, and might come in very handy for a Tobacco Regie official.

However, in a quiet talk with my companion this plan was concocted. We would have our plain breakfast (with Turkish coffee) pay the khanji a backshish, have our horses led around to the door, mount, and be off through the Circassian country south, before our doubtful friend Halim Bey could make up his mind what to do, or, better yet, before he was risen. The plan worked all right, save for one circumstance—burly and ugly-looking Halim Bey stood by the side of the road we were to take, evidently laying for us. "The game is up," I thought "our bluff hasn't worked." But I determined to put on a bold front, and so, with my rifle across my saddle, I rode right on, looking neither to right nor left, I fully expected to find a strong arm shooting through the air, wresting the rifle from my grasp or to hear orders shouted to a posse to hold me up. But the bluff did work after all. Halim Bey did not quite dare to lay hands on us, not knowing how much influence I could exert to his detriment in high Constantinople circles. Once by, we started the horses off at a sharp trot, then into a gallop, and soon were out of sound of the serf breaking on the south beach of the Black Sea.

The Ruml Plan

By Ernest Lindley

Problem Of The Income Tax

AS A RULE, the income taxpayer pays his last year's tax out of this year's income. From the point of view of both the Treasury and the individual taxpayer, that may be most unfortunate. This year scores, probably hundreds of thousands of income taxpayers are leaving private life to go into the armed services or civilian jobs in the Government at relatively modest salaries. To many of them, how to pay the tax on last year's income is a serious problem.

LINDLEY

Still in private life are many income taxpayers whose incomes have shrunk because they were in occupations adversely affected by the war. Automobile salesmen who had a record-breaking year in 1941 are now, in some instances, earning much smaller incomes as workers on production lines. And even in peacetime there are hazards which make the present method of collecting income taxes a serious problem.

Illness or accident may suddenly reduce a man's income. And if he dies while earning a substantial salary but before he has accumulated savings, the income tax will make a hole in his insurance. In some instances it may leave his family impoverished.

THESE EMBARRASSMENTS and serious personal difficulties from being a year behind in income tax payments naturally increase as the income tax rates are raised. A prudent man would always try to put aside out of current income enough money to pay the income tax due next year. But this certainly has not been the popular custom. And many who have begun to try to do it in the last year or so have been up against the problem of rising taxes. To pay the tax on 1941 income in 1942, and at the same time to put aside all of the tax on 1942 income due in 1943, is beyond the capacity of many household budgets. There would not be enough left for current living expenses.

The desirability of getting income taxes on a pay-as-you-go basis is recognized in the Treasury and in Congress. But this means double taxation in one year, or perhaps spread over two years—and that will pose serious financial problems for a great many taxpayers.

A way out of this difficulty has been proposed by Beardsley Ruml, treasurer of R. H. Macy & Co. and chairman of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York. Mr. Ruml proposes simply that the personal income tax collected in 1943 be considered a tax on 1943 income. The taxpayer would pay a "tentative" tax based on his 1943 income. If his 1943 income proves to be smaller than his 1942 income, he would get a rebate or a credit at the end of the year. If his 1943 income proves to be larger than his 1942 income, he would pay the added tax due at the end of the year.

This means "forgiving" one year's tax. But it would not cut down the Treasury's receipts. The individual would pay his taxes in 1943, just as he is doing this year. The saving to the individual would occur only when his income is suddenly cut down, or cut off—by entering the armed services, by illness, by accident, by loss of his job, or by death. To compensate for the year's taxes "forgiven" now, the estate and inheritance taxes could be adjusted upward—as they almost certainly will be anyway.

Under the Ruml plan, a man who knows that his 1943 income will be substantially less than his 1942 income could apply to the Treasury for a special adjustment in his "tentative" tax. Suppose that a man now earning $5000 a year is drafted next January 1. He knows that his 1943 income will be much less than $5000. If he paid a tentative tax on $5000 he would have a large rebate coming at the end of the year. It would be simpler and fairer to readjust his "tentative" tax at the beginning of the year. Besides, he might not have the money to pay a tax on a $5000 income.

UNDER THE RUML PLAN the 1943 tax could be paid either in quarterly installments or by a combination of quarterly installments with a withholding tax applied to wage envelopes and salary checks. Either way, it would be paid during the year in which the money was received.

The Treasury has not indorsed the Ruml plan and some of the Treasury experts are opposed to it. But the Treasury does want to get income tax payments at least partly in a current basis. The present tax bill, as it left the House, provided for a 5 per cent withholding tax, beginning in January. This is a sound counter-inflationary measure—and it may also reach smaller taxable incomes which are not now reported.

Under the Treasury plan, if the transition to pay as you go is ever completed, there will be, in effect, double taxation for one year. At a time when billions of dollars in excess purchasing power needed to be sopped up anyway, this may be desirable, as a rule. But for many families in the middle brackets, without substantial savings on which to call for meeting the extra tax, the financial difficulties will be serious. They can be ameliorated by allowances for payments on debts and insurance policies. But, even so, it is doubtful if the full transition to a pay-as-you-go basis could be made without undue hardship. The double-taxation feature is also a deterrent to increasing the income tax rates.

The Ruml plan has the advantage of making the shift in a clean-cut manner. And if the shift to pay-as-you-go is clean-cut there should be less hesitation in increasing the personal income tax rates to the levels needed to put our war finances on a sound basis.

Sweden's Challenge

By Selden Menefee

U-Boat Activity

Sweden has issued a strong challenge to the Nazis as well as the Russians over the invasion of her territorial waters.

In the toughest statement yet heard from the remaining island of neutrality in Scandinavia, Motala radio said in a Spanish-language broadcast that "the Swedes must protect their own territory by force of arms." Other broadcasts have contained statements such as the following: "Units of the Swedish Navy were directed to the place and depth charges were fired in order to completely destroy the U-boat."

In a later broadcast the Motala station said that Sweden, although neutral, has sustained irreparable losses in seamen and ships. "Up to the present time, the war has cost Sweden 900 lives and 150 ships."

During the last month, over a quarter of all Swedish broadcasts heard in the United States dealt with violation of Swedish neutrality and Swedish resentment thereof. Most of the charges were vague; but Germany was specifically referred to six times, and Russia only twice.

Swedish Radio

The Swedish radio had previously been very careful to preserve at least the appearance of neutrality. Early in July, for example, a Swedish broadcaster referred to a "Russian U-boat attack" and "German battering of fishing boats in the Skaggerak" as both arousing resentment.

The German press and radio have played up the fact that Sweden has sent protests to Moscow and London over Russian U-boat activity in the Baltic and the crossing of Swedish territory by British planes. But the United Nations apparently did not take these protests very seriously; Russia issued a routine denial, and Britain paid little attention to the Swedish note.

Broadcasts from Germany also cite the Swedish press to prove that Swedish opinion favors firm action against Russia. This technique allows Berlin to pick its quotations from the more conservative press.

All present indications are, however, that Sweden is violently resentful against Russia and Germany—not Russia and Britain, as the Nazis imply. This was recognized by Berlin in the following quotation from a program sent to Ireland:

"The Swedish attitude with regard to British planes flying over Swedish territory in order to attack German towns has been observed in Berlin with amazement. Apparently Swedish clouds were too low to make (perceptible) the breach of neutrality on the part of England." This may have been intended as a warning to Ireland not to take a similar attitude.

The Swedish transmitter at Motala subsequently (July 19) carried the following statement:

"In the case of air flights over Swedish territory, orders have been given to fire at those importunate visitors. However, it is wrong to fire at foreign planes which may unwittingly have crossed into Swedish territory, and in such cases orders have been given to fire warning shots only.

"On the other hand, when foreign submarines threaten Swedish lines of communication within the territorial waters of Sweden, the case is completely different."

Sympathy for Norway

Swedish sympathy with Finland, which was very high during the Russo-Finnish war, has declined sharply since it became apparent that Hitler had the Finns in tow. It has been replaced by strong sympathy for the Norwegians. The Swedish radio frequently quotes statements and editorials in support of the Norwegian bishops and teachers who oppose Quisling. The Swedes have become more and more outspoken on such topics as their defenses against invasion have grown stronger.

A quotation from a recent Swedish broadcast to this country illustrates Sweden's present attitude toward Germany. Referring to the post-war period, the radio said:

"There is only one thing which [the Swedish people] want—to educate people away from brute force as a political means."

On July 21 the Stockholm radio added, "Here in Sweden everyone believes that without the freedom of the north there is no future for the north . . . the Swedes think of the future north as independent of special formations of great powers."

Preparing For Action

By Mark Sullivan

Fresh Start In Inflation Battle

The present status of official action to check inflation is one of preparing for action. President Roosevelt has turned the matter over to one of his personal trouble-shooters. The trouble-shooter's function is to assemble the facts, condense them and digest them, and then submit them to the President. This is the limit of the function of most of the aides whom the President uses—only in rare cases does he confer authority to act.

SULLIVAN

After Mr. Roosevelt's trouble-shooter reports about inflation, presumably action will follow—it is imperative that something be done. The action cannot be by Congress. That body is in a kind of informal recess, with most of the members at home looking after their campaigns. Before they went, they received assurances, transmitted to their leaders, that the President had nothing pressing for them to do; that if anything should arise, he would call them back. This means that whatever step is taken about inflation must be taken by the President.

The facts the President must pass upon are not facts of inflation—these are all too plain. They are the facts about conditions which have arisen within the Administration, between himself and farm leaders in Congress, and between himself and labor leaders. Within this group of conditions, the one that is acute at this stage has to do with the labor leaders.

THE PRESENT STAGE began April 27 and 28. On those days the President made a dramatic attack on inflation and the rising cost of living, by means of an announced program of seven points. On the first day, April 27, he sent a message to Congress, in which, in the points dealing with labor, he said: "Wages in general can and should be kept at existing levels."

The following day, with the forceful effect of reiteration, Mr. Roosevelt made a radio address to the country. In this he repeated, almost word for word, most of what he had said to Congress. His point about labor was made even more specific, speaking of labor as if he were addressing them personally:

"Do you work for wages? You will have to forgo higher wages for your particular job for the duration of the war."

At that time there were pending many demands by labor leaders for increased wage rates. They included demands in most of the automobile industry, in a large part of the steel industry, and in other fields in which wage rates were already relatively high. Some of the demands were pending between employers and unions. Some had been carried to the stage of submission to the War Labor Board.

Had these demands been withdrawn by the labor leaders when the President made his declaration; or had the War Labor Board made clear that it would not grant further wage increases, the battle against inflation might have been won. The farm group in Congress could hardly have failed to act in the same spirit. All the groups whom the President addressed in his 7-point program, would either have been gladly willing, or would have been under moral compulsion, to act in the spirit of the President's program.

Actually, however, the labor leaders continued to press their demands, and the War Labor Board to grant the demands. When this was seen by farm leaders in Congress, they took a position of similar resistance against steps designed to prevent the prices of crops from rising. Psychologically, the President's drive against inflation on April 27 and 28, was lost within a week after it was begun.

ONE GROUP OF CASES before the War Labor Board—a demand for wage increases in four steel corporations—was conspicuous. It was known that if increases were granted in these cases, corresponding demands would be pressed in the entire steel industry, and also in the automobile and other industries.

There was some expectation that the War Labor Board would find a way to conform to President Roosevelt's declaration. Included in the demands of the labor leaders in the steel cases, were demands apart from wages. There was a demand for a modified union shop, in the form of "maintenance of union membership." There was a demand for the "check-off"—that is, that the employer be required to deduct union dues, and transmit them to the unions before giving the workers in the union their pay checks. It was anticipated that the War Labor Board might grant these demands, and use this grant as partial compensation for the refusal of increased wages.

Actually, the War Labor Board granted these demands and also a part of the demand for higher wages—44 cents a day compared with the demand for $1.

What had been expected, followed. There were immediate demands for corresponding wage increases throughout many fields of industry. Farm leaders in Congress felt justified in their attitude. Agencies of Government charged with the function of preventing inflation, complained of the War Labor Board's action.

It is with these and other matters that the President must now deal, in what must amount to a fresh start in the battle against inflation.

WAACs' Drill Sergeant

You think you've a tough job
In Iceland or Rome;
I'll swap you the one that
They've slipped me at home;
I'm drilling the women
The best that I can,
But can't yell the things that
I'd yell to a man!

II.

"Eyes right, ya gorilla!"
I once used to shout,
But that and "Hey, fathead!"
Are both strictly out;
Of jobs in the service
The hardest is mine—
I've got to discard all
My old Army line.

IIII.

Did privates toe in? I Could yell, "Lissen, stupe!
You do that again you'll Get socked for a loop!"
"Chins up, ya baboons!"" was
My cry through the day
But drilling the dames, well,
It ain't the same way!

IV.

"Eyes right! Are you cockeyed?"
I'd yell in loud tones,
But now it's "please try once Again, Mrs. Jones!"
"Hey! Throw out your chest! Stow
That barroom effect!"
Are into the discard; they Ain't quite correct!

V.

"Hey, mug! Wipe that grin off!"
I loved that so much,
But can't use it now for
It lacks the right touch;
"Ya bowlegged scarecrow!"—
Is off my routine;
It's now "Watch your form, if You don't mind, Miss Green!"

VI.

"C'mon, ya big droop, get
Some snap in them knees!"
Went well with my old squads,
But NEVER with THESE!
"Your shirt's out, ya dumbell!"
I can't yell no more . . .
Forgive me my groans, it's
One elluva war!

VII.

"That hat is no ale can!
To hang on one ear!"
Is now out of order
With "pull in ya rear!"
But this is what slays me
And makes my head dance:
No more can I belllow,
"Hey, pull up them pants!"

The ways of the radio are incredible. We tuned in at random the other day. A professorial voice was pleading: "Are you looking at life the right way? Are you alive to your responsibilities? . . . Are you giving thought to your future and your family's future? . . . Take advantage of the course in education which we are offering . . ."

And then (you could have floored us with a cobweb) this: "Just a moment . . . There's another scratch at Rockingham. The results at Garden Park in the second . . ."

The Mounting Crisis In Russia

IN THIS WAR we have as often been betrayed by our fears as deluded by our hopes. And we need not look further than the struggle in Russia to find excellent illustrations of both phenomena.

NOVER

When the fighting began on the Eastern Front 13 months ago nobody made the mistake, that had been made in the past with regards to, say, France, of overestimating Russia's military resources, the capacity of her leadership, the depth of her people's patriotism, the fervor of their fighting spirit. On the contrary, the general tendency was to underestimate Russia and the Russians.

Instead of being overwhelmed in six weeks or three months, as many had predicted, Russia was still very much in the field a year after she had been attacked. During the summer and autumn of 1941 she had suffered tremendous losses in men, materiel and resources. Some of her greatest food areas, her principal iron deposits, innumerable factories, a great network of railways had all fallen into enemy hands.

But Russia's will to fight on remained unimpaired. And when cold weather set in she was still strong enough at least partially to take advantage of the turn in the tide.

IT WAS EVIDENT by midwinter that our fears regarding Russia had, happily, been grossly exaggerated. But the reaction from this mood of despair regarding Russia's chances of withstanding the Nazi onslaught probably went to the other extreme. Since Russia had demonstrated such a surprising capacity to take punishment, to fight on vigorously despite tremendous losses, the assumption began to gain ground that Russia could go on indefinitely, regardless of how far east the German armies came.

But this assumption is as wrong as the earlier assumption that the Red army would crumple at the first impact of the Nazi steamroller.

To answer to those who have complacently assumed that the Russians, like the Chinese, could always exchange space for time has now been given by the army organ, Red Star. Any further withdrawal, says that newspaper, will place Russia's fate in mortal danger. And Josef Stalin has issued an order to the Red army to halt its retreat in the Caucasus at all costs, "Not one step back," he is quoted as saying.

IT MUST not be assumed that if Stalingrad should happen to fall, as Rostov fell, Russian resistance will collapse. But the outcome of the present fighting in the Don-Volga region and in the northern Caucasus may make an ultimate Russian collapse possible and will certainly gravely weaken the capacity of Russia as a combatant.

We have been regaled a great deal during recent months with optimistic stories of Russia's vast resources in the Ural area and deep in the heart of Siberia. Much has also been made of the fact that whenever possible the Soviet government has moved whole factories and their attendant workers from danger zones to safe havens far behind the battlefront. There is no way of knowing how true these reports are. But even if they are entirely true the fact remains that without western Russia, without the Ukraine and the Donets and the Caucasus Russia would be hard hit, indeed.

WHEN THE PRESENT German offensive began Russia still had in her possession part of the Ukraine, all of the Don Valley region, all of the Caucausus, in addition to regions still untouched by the invaders. Yet the Russian army was too weak to carry out more than a limited offensive against the Germans whereas the Nazis have, during the past two months, penetrated beyond any point they ever managed to reach during last year's fighting.

It is apparent that the magnificence of the Russian stand last year had led us to overestimate Russia's strength as previously that strength had been underestimated. Should the battle of the Caucasus be lost by the Red army, Russia's strength will further be undermined.

WHAT THIS WOULD mean in the overall picture of the war can easily be imagined. Through the deployment of a relatively limited number of men, the bulk of the Russian army has been kept immobilized in the region from Leningrad to Voronezh. That has enabled the Nazis to outnumber their foes in the Don Valley. If the Red army is further weakened, the Nazis could, at a certain point, go on the defensive in the East secure in the belief that the Red army has lost its striking power, and then move a sufficient large body of troops back to the West to make an invasion of the continent by the Allies an exceedingly costly operation.

At the same time, part of the German forces could be withdrawn from Russia for operations in the Near East and Egypt. Either development or both would have very serious implications for the Allies.

In other words, we can take little comfort in the hope that, whatever happens in the present fighting, the Russian army will remain an army in being. Marshal Timoshenko has carried out his retreat across the Don with considerable success, at least from the viewpoint of keeping his forces intact. But this retreat has its limitations, as the Red Star indicates. Soon the Red army in the Caucasus may be cut off from direct rail communication to Central Russia and Hitler will be in a position to apply once again to an enemy force his strategy of dividing a whole into parts and then separately smashing each of the parts.

For this reason the battle for Stalingrad, now in the making, with the Russians preparing to throw in the reserves they have carefully husbanded, will be one of the most crucial of the war.

The Gallup Poll

60% of British Public Favors Invasion Of Europe This Year; 48% of U. S. in Favor

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., July 30.—Growing public dissatisfaction in Britain with the government's conduct of the war, and a strong tide of sentiment for opening a second front are shown in the results of latest surveys by the British Institute of Public Opinion.

In June, before the fall of Tobruk and before the Nazis started their heavy drive in Russia, 57 per cent of all voters questioned by the British Institute expressed themselves satisfied with the government's conduct of the war. Today the latest poll shows only 41 per cent satisfied.

This change came simultaneously with a sharp drop in Prime Minister Churchill's personal popularity. As reported last week, 78 per cent indicate approval of Churchill today as compared to 86 per cent in June.

Commenting on the changed attitude, the London News Chronicle says editorially that deep-seated causes of "disquiet and dissatisfaction" will remain until drastic "improvements have been made in military, scientific and political direction and coordination of the war effort." It also lays some of the dissatisfaction to the failure to open a second front.

Second Front Attitude

With widespread mass meetings throughout England calling for a second front, the British Institute has conducted a scientific measurement of the amount of second-front sentiment.

The results indicate that while about one voter in every four is undecided, the majority in favor of risking a second front this year is substantial and has increased sharply since June. At that time 49 per cent felt an invasion this summer would be worth the cost.

The attitude today is as follows:

"Should the Allies try to invade Europe this year?"

Yes	60%
No	12
Undecided	28

By contrast with the results of a similar survey in the United States it appears that the second-front sentiment is stronger in Britain than it is here.

American Opinion

A recent test of American sentiment by the American Institute of Public Opinion showed the following:

"Would you like to see England and the United States attempt a large-scale attack on Germany in Western Europe in the near future, or do you think they should wait until they are stronger?"

Attempt attack now	48%
Wait till we are stronger	34
Undecided	18

Canadian public opinion, as measured by the Canadian Institute of Public Opinion, is closely similar to that in the United States. The Canadian Institute found 46 per cent in a recent poll favoring the opening of a second front now, as compared to the 48 per cent in the United States.

Gillette Terms Post's Editorial On Rubber Bill 'Contemptible'

Senator Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, yesterday attacked as "false and contemtible" an editorial criticism in yesterday's Post of the bill passed by Congress to create a new agency to promote manufacture of rubber out of grain alcohol.

The editorial assertions, part of The Post's open campaign against "Political Profiteering," said the bill "was pushed by grain grower politicians without any warrant that rubber from grain alcohol is the best or quickest process for making synthetic rubber." The editorial said the farm bloc wanted to "exploit the war in their own selfish interests" and observed that only from 9 to 13 Senators, all members of the farm bloc, were present when the Senate passed the bill.

"I brand it here as false and contemptible, with not a word of truth or factual situation on which it can be predicated," said Gillette, chairman of the Senate Subcommittee which handled the bill.

"It is an absolute disregard of the facts to state that there was no basis for it (the bill), and again to refer to the parliamentary situation under which the bill was passed."

Gillette said any attempt to impugn the honesty, patriotism, sincerity, earnestness and fairness of the men with whom he was associated in considering the bill "is not only vicious, it is vile, it is venomous and it is wholly unjustified."

Bill Would Ease Women's Work Limit

A bill which would permit women employes in the District to work more than eight hours a day, if the Minimum Wage Board feels the extra hours are warranted by emergency conditions, was introduced yesterday by Representative Randolph chairman of the House District Committee.

The measure is a substitute for previously introduced legislation which would have suspended the law only in case of women employed by railroads and bus lines.

It was proposed by officials of the Union Station, who pointed out that women were now taking over jobs formerly held by men, in which an arbitrary ban against overtime is impractical. They also declared that the women are automatically cut off from overtime earnings, to which they would be entitled under the Railway Labor Act.

They cited as examples women now holding ticket-selling jobs, who would be forced to close their wicket in the face of waiting customers when their eight hours were up, unless a suspension of the rule provided.

The substitute bill, granting the wage board power to make such exceptions in all cases where they find it warranted, was proposed after other employers claimed that the same condition was extant in other industries. They said that the women were taking over an ever-increasing variety of men's jobs, due to the shortage of man power.

Present law forbids a woman employe to work more than eight hours in any one day or more than 48 hours a week.

Sandy Hook Light Out for Duration

Fort Hancock, N. J., July 30 (INS). The Sandy Hook lighthouse is out for the duration.

The beacon is at Fort Hancock on the point of Sandy Hook. It is one of the highest candle powered in the world, and has shown brightly since 1764—with one exception, in 1776 when Revolutionary war patriots smashed it to hamper British shipping in New York Harbor. Now it has been blacked out to protect shipping of the United Nations from enemy submarines.

Jury to Get Insurance Case Today

A Municipal Court jury will decide today whether William H. M. Stover, secretary-treasurer of the National Hospital Service Society, Inc., is guilty of soliciting membership in an organization that was not authorized to do business in Washington.

The verdict had been expected late yesterday, but the calling of Albert Jordan, District insurance commissioner, as a prosecution witness after the defense rested, forced Judge Walter J. Casey to postpone the final pleas until today.

Jordan's testimony was intended to indicate that Stover knew the insurance society did not meet the requirements set by the District law for the establishment of mutual-benefit organizations. The insurance official related a number of communications between him and Stover relating to adjustments that were deemed necessary before a permit could be issued.

Stover was on the witness stand most of the day. Questioned by Defense Attorney Cornelius Dougherty he testified that he had never personally solicited membership for the firm.

George Expects Tax Deductions For Old Debts

advocating a program of "induced savings" to skim excess purchasing power and stimulate war bond sales. Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau was questioned about "induced savings" at a press conference yesterday. Morgenthau said it "is a plan that deserves study." He added: "Senator George is chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, and anything he has to say about taxes must be considered more seriously than something any other Senator might say."

But Morgenthau termed induced savings a form of compulsory savings, pointing out that from the start he has opposed compulsory marketing of war bonds. The Secretary left the door open, however, for a change in his position if war bond sales seriously lagged.

Bond Sales are Short

Asked if the Treasury would meet its July goal of a billion dollars in voluntary bond sales, he said, "I don't think so." He estimated sales this month would reach around 900 million dollars. This he called "a tidy sum."

George outlined his proposals to reporters after business witnesses testified.

Paulsen Spence of the Spence Engineering Co. of Walden, N. Y., said his company could treble its present quota of pressure-reducing valves for war plants if it could retain enough money from taxes to expand. He estimated his $200,000 plant investment would yield $50,000 profit this year, but the House bill would take $32,000 of that in taxes.

"You gentlemen should consider whether you want to get taxes or get out war production," Spence said. He argued that the tax bill should be designed "to help us get out production and give us some credit for being smart and knowing how to turn over capital fast."

Senator Connally (Democrat) of Texas asked "why he stayed in business" if he thought taxes were too high.

"Because I'm patriotic," said Spence. "If I went by dollars and cents, the best thing for me to do would be to sell out, invest my money in municipal bonds, go back to Louisiana, and go catfishing."

C. F. Hotchkiss, jr., president of the Stow Manufacturing Co., of Binghampton, N. Y., manufacturing flexible drive shafts for the Navy, said he had been forced to borrow heavily from the RFC to buy machinery to handle new business which "doubles every two or three days." He complained that after taxes all the company's net profit next year would go toward paying off the RFC loan.

D. C. Air Cadet Killed in Fall From Plane

The Navy yesterday announced the death of Aviation Cadet Elmer L. Mantz, jr., 22, of Washington, in a flying accident at the Naval Training Station at Pensacola, Fla.

Son of a well-known Washington insurance man, Mantz fell from the cockpit of a training plane on a routine flight and plunged 300 feet to the earth. It was believed he had unfastened his safety belt and was thrown from the craft when it banked sharply.

A native of Washington, Cadet Mantz attended Roosevelt High School and the Georgetown University School of Foreign Service before joining the Navy last August.

On completion of basic training at the Naval Air Station at Anacostia, D. C., a week ago, he was sworn in as a naval aviation cadet at Pensacola.

He is survived by his parents, who live at 1323 Longfellow Street Northwest; a sister, Miss Betsy L. Mantz, 24, and a brother, Charles E. Mantz, 18, recently graduated from Central High School and now a draughtsman at the Navy Yard.

39 Girls Pass First Tests for WAAC Auxiliaries

First mental alertness examination for WAAC auxiliaries in Washington, yesterday at Seventeenth and K Streets Northwest, resulted in passing grades for all 39 of the girls called in.

"One just barely passed, but most of them showed up very well," declared Lieut. John A. Andre of the local recruiting offices.

Following their mental tests the girls were interviewed by Mrs. Lawrence Shephard, general secretary of the Washington Y. W. C. A., and the following committee: Judge Annabel Matthews, Mrs. James K. McClintock, Mrs. John F. Thomas, Mrs. Robert Leonard, Miss Anne Larrabee and Mrs. Charles Runyon.

Similar examinations will be held each Thursday, according to Capt. F. J. Sloan, who said the numbers examined would be enlarged as buildings at the training school in Fort Des Moines, Iowa, are completed. Under present legislation, 150,000 women are to be recruited.

10 Lose Lives In Army Cargo Plane Crash

By International News Service

Minneapolis, July 30.—Jammed controls, it was believed tonight, caused the crash of an Army cargo transport plane in which 10 employes of Northwest Airlines were killed.

The ship, a converted 10-passenger Boeing plane, operated under the Army Ferry Command, crashed shortly after taking off here and burst into flames. Eight of the dead had gone up "just for the ride."

Witnesses said the plane attained a height of about 200 feet, appeared to nose up, swing to one side, then stalled and crashed.

So intense was the heat from the blazing wreckage, would-be rescuers were kept at a distance.

The pilots of the plane were identified as Kenneth Olson and John Fischer, both of Minneapolis. The other victims were Northwest mechanics and maintenance men, all of Minneapolis and St. Paul.

Crash Kills Housewife

Houston, Tex., July 30 (AP).—A housewife and two Army student pilots were killed today by the crash of a training plane into a brick residence on Riverside Drive.

Mrs. C. B. Baldwin was found dead in the wreckage of her bedroom.

Ellington Field officials identified the fliers as Aviation Cadet William R. Simpson, jr., 24, of California, Pa., and Leland F. Scholl, 22, of Indianapolis.

The house was virtually demolished.

Cadet Killed, Instructors Hurt

Pine Bluff, Ark., July 30 (AP).—Aviation Cadet Gilbert F. Brendle, 26, Tiffin, Ohio, was killed and Civilian Instructor George E. Goodhead, jr., 27, Tulsa, Okla., injured critically today when their training plane struck a power line pole and crashed during a practice emergency landing near Moscow, 15 miles south of Pine Bluff.

The left wing of the plane was torn off and the machine crashed in a field 500 yards away.

U. S. Buildings Prepared for Oil Shortage

Federal buildings in Washington are well prepared to withstand the fuel oil shortage this winter, Government Procurement Director Clifton E. Mack said yesterday.

The statement was made in reference to a news story in The Washington Post of yesterday, which quoted Wilson J. Dye, chief of the fuel oil branch of the Procurement Division, as saying contracts for fuel oil had been signed only to last through September 30.

For nearly a year, the procurement chief said, the division has been placing fuel oil contracts on a 12-month basis "wherever possible." However, he added, "because of wartime problems, oil companies in the District have not committed themselves beyond a three-month period."

On May 25, Mack said, he advised heads of all departments and establishments to curtail immediately the consumption of fuel oil and to convert, wherever possible, to coal. Earlier he advised the same agencies to begin immediate ordering of coal and to store as much as possible.

"Moreover," Mack said, "the Government has utilized thoroughly existing oil storage facilities in public buildings in Washington."

The procurement division's fuel yard here has made arrangements to store 90,000 tons of coal in preparation for the coming winter, he said. He added that requirements of the central heating plant are assured through the spring of 1943.

800 Refugees Disembark at Baltimore

By Louis Nevin
By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Md., July 30.—With scores of naval and military intelligence officers, Federal Bureau of Investigation agents and Baltimore police on hand, officials today began the slow and technically involved task of clearing for disembarkation nearly 800 refugees from the European and Middle East theaters of war.

They arrived at this port aboard the Portuguese steamer Nyassa after 20 days out of Lisbon, punctuated by a five-day stop at Bermuda for inspection by British officials.

The passenger list included, naval intelligence officers said, a party of about 150 Polish technicians and their families en route for Canada; 30 refugee children from a refugee camp in France and about 160 children from other nations, the latter with their parents.

Three little Spanish brothers—9 to 12—told a fairly typical story:

At the start of the Spanish civil war they lived with six other brothers and sisters, their parents and 17 laborers on a truck farm they owned near Barcelona.

About four years ago the family moved to France to avoid the terrors of war. On the way one little sister got lost and hasn't been heard from since. Their mother was wounded by a rifle ball while crossing the frontier and died later in a French hospital. Four brothers died in the civil war. One brother who stayed behind hasn't been heard from since.

But in France they got into another holocaust. Their father is now in a labor battalion, where they do not know. They themselves were in a refugee camp near Vichy until sent to Marseille, thence to Lisbon and from there to this country.

Still to leave the ship was Canadian-born Mrs. Jeanne Marie Bougerol Martin, a volunteer war nurse in Paris when the Germans entered France and her twin sons, Roger and Jeanne Martin, born at Casa Blanca, Morocco.

Mrs. Martin and her twin sons returned to this country through the efforts of a former employer, Jay C. Hormel, head of the Minnesota packing concern.

Three Belgian children, two brothers, 15 and 11, and a sister, 13, said that their mother was in a concentration camp, their father in England.

Nautical Breakfast Is Nutritious and Appealing; Flavorsome Blueberries Play Double Role in Morning Team as Fruit and in Hot Muffins

"DON'T skip breakfast." That is the warning of Dr. Thomas Parran, Surgeon General of the United States. Dr. Parran recently spoke his "piece" about the value of breakfast, when he said, "Your body is designed to function smoothly. It can't on a hit-or-miss schedule. Set up a timetable of meals and keep it."

In a recent investigation among 170 defense workers, 27 percent were found to have eaten no breakfast on the day interviewed. Forty-nine percent had eaten no fruit or fruit juice, 57 percent no eggs and 75 percent no breakfast cereal. Such a finding set me to wondering about the kind of breakfasts that are eaten by men who have great responsibility in the defense activities of our armed forces.

A breakfast which I was fortunate enough to attend recently, given by the wife of a naval officer who was leaving for active sea duty, was so appealing, nutritious and enthusiastically received that I am passing it on to others who may want to serve a breakfast that will be remembered for a long, long time.

This breakfast was worthy of the Navy officers present in their crisp white uniforms. The color scheme was up-to-the-minute—blue and gold. And the food was so appealing that it would make any Navy man feel fit to sail the seven seas or sail into any kind of work that is to be done. This was the menu:

Nautical Breakfast

Grapefruit With Blueberries
Omelet Canadian Bacon
Blueberry Muffins Butter
Coffee

It's easy enough to duplicate this nautical breakfast. But do it while the luscious giant blueberries are plentiful during August. The starter was a chilled grapefruit half with a cache of blueberries—a welcome way of serving citrus fruit and berries that are so healthful. This was served on a yellow plate garnished with a deep green grape leaf.

Hearty slices of Canadian bacon flanked a sunny omelet. This presentation of eggs was an appealing variation to bacon and egg routine. It was when the little yellow bread basket filled with blueberry muffins was passed that the guest gave spirited expression to the food.

Blueberry muffins can be made to perfection by the most inexperienced cook if a reliable recipe is followed. The batter should be mixed as quickly as possible. No overstirring of the batter for that creates tunnels, peaks and knobs on top and a soggy texture, which is just what is not wanted.

Here is the recipe that the hostess gave me by which she made her blueberry muffins.

Blueberry Muffins—Sift together 2 cups sifted enriched flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder, 1 tablespoon sugar and ½ teaspoon salt. Add 2 beaten eggs, 1 cup milk and 4 tablespoons melted shortening. Mix all together quickly. Wash and drain 1 cup blueberries, sprinkle with 3 tablespoons sugar and a little sifted flour. Add to muffin mixture. Half fill greased muffin pans. Bake in moderately hot oven at 400 degrees about 20 minutes. Makes 12 muffins.

This year's banner crop of blueberries that have rolled into market can brighten up more than breakfast menus. Blueberry shortcake, blueberry pie, blueberry cupcakes, blue-bonnet betty, blueberry roll, blueberry dumplings is to mention but a few of the delightful foods that can be made using blueberries.

The food value is also another reason to enjoy these delicious berries. They are a source of vitamins. When selecting the berries be sure they are full-colored, fresh and clean. They should be absolutely free of moisture and of uniform size. They should be kept in a cool place as in the refrigerator in a shallow tray or dish, covered lightly with wax paper and washed just as they are used.

Blueberry individual shortcakes make an appealing dessert. The following is a recipe for making them:

Blueberry Shortcake—Sift 2 cups sifted enriched flour with 3 teaspoon salt. Cut or rub in 4 to 6 tablespoons shortening. Add 2/3 to ¾ cup milk, enough to make soft dough. Turn out on lightly floured board and knead gently. Roll out to ½ inch thickness. Cut with a 3-inch floured biscuit cutter. Place on ungreased baking sheet and bake in hot oven, 450 degrees, for 10 to 12 minutes. Makes 14 biscuits. Place sweetened blueberries between two biscuits, top with fluffs of whipped cream and more of the sweetened blueberries.

With the Nation's sugar bowls rationed, cooks will be looking for desserts that will use but a small quantity of sugar. The ambrosial flavor of wine to fresh fruits is a happy solution. The wine will sweeten while it flavors.

Blueberry tarts muscatel is a delicious verion that has been created with the meagerly filled sugar bin in mind. Only six tablespoons of sugar are needed to make the tarts. A half-cup of California muscatel wine takes the place of ¾ cup of sugar in the recipe and its flavor accents and dramatizes the delicate flavor of the blueberries.

In the cooking process all of the alcohol evaporates, leaving a fine flavor essence of the wine and its sweetness to enhance the dish. These tarts are made according to the following recipe:

Blueberry Tarts Muscatel—Combine 3 cups fresh blueberries with ½ cup California muscatel wine and 1 tablespoon lemon juice. Mix ¼ cup cornstarch with 6 tablespoons sugar and add to mixture. Cook in double boiler until thickened. Cool slightly. Pour into tart shells. Cool and garnish with whipped cream.

Blueberries come to the nautical breakfast pictured above. Cupped in the golden segments of the chilled grapefruit half is a cache of giant blueberries. This flavorsome fruit is also used in the blueberry muffins. A sunny omelet flanked by Canadian bacon and coffee completes menu served at breakfast honoring Navy officers.

New Cellophane Coffee Bags Conserve Metal

Wrapping coffee in cellophane is American industry's answer to the metal shortage. It will conserve thousands of tons of steel and tin for guns and war planes.

More than a score of coffee packers already have shifted from tin cans and are packing their product in a specially designed cellophane-lined paper bag. The moisture-proof and air-tight properties of cellophane insure that coffee will retain its roaster-freshness for a reasonable length of time.

Manufacturers of the cellophane used in these new coffee packages, state that coffee packers have ordered upwards of ten million of the cellophane-lined bags. Use of this type of container not only saves important tonnage of metal but also conserves shipping space and weight.

The cellophane-laminated bag weighs less than two-fifths of an ounce, only one-thirteenth the weight of the average coffee can. Every three bags used saves a pound of metal. Ten million bags, weighing only 131 tons, will save more than 1600 tons of metal. They will be an almost negligible fraction of the shipping weight of ten million pounds of coffee.

Many coffee packers "wash" the bag with carbon dioxide just before filling to remove all oxygen, thus retarding oxidation which impairs coffee flavor. The bag is then sealed by a quick pinch between heated metal bars—a standard heat-sealing process employed with cellophane.

While some brands of coffee have been packed in paper bags heretofore, it has been found that cellophane lining gives better protection and permits a longer shelf-life than ordinary paper. It does not use the critical materials employed in some types of special linings.

This type of bag, known as the "Flav-o-tainer," is also being used for packaging cocoa, cookies and certain chemicals, procedures which likewise are saving vital metals.

Milk Brick a New Wrinkle

One of the latest developments in the dehydrating field in the new "milk brick." It's done this way: Water is evaporated from the milk and the resulting powder is molded into a firm block under high pressure. A nine-inch milk brick—the result of the process—contains all the food material in 26 gallons of milk. And of course it takes up much less space in storing and shipping.

Frankfurts Fill Nutrition Bill And Aid Cook

Frankfurts for lawn suppers, frankfurts for luncheons, frankfurts for dinners, frankfurts for picnics! When it's hot, how luxurious it is to have a meat that fills the niche on the nutrition chart and yet remains in the refrigerator until ten minutes before dinner time. It's the answer to a homemaker's prayer on a "90-degree-in-the-shade" day. She can sit coolly under the big elm in the yard until just before dinner, and then disapper into the kitchen and come out in no time with a mouth-watering dinner of hot juicy frankfurts, a buttered green vegetable, crisp salad, an iced drink and rolls.

Buying good frankfurts is as simple a task as preparing them, for it's a matter of buying by brand. Frankfurts made of pure ingredients in sanitary kitchens, carefully seasoned with spices, will be labeled to tell you so. There's a new dinner-size frankfurt on the market, too, for summer suppers the family will enjoy. Drop the frankfurts into simmering—not boiling—water and leave for 5 to 7 minutes. Here's a tip—remove frankfurts from the water with kitchen tongs or a spoon, so you don't prick the skins and release the good meat juices.

French vegetables and hot frankfurts always make a delicious combination for lunch or supper—and it's a meal that will help check off the required food essentials on the nutrition chart. Corn-on-the-cob, green beans, spinach or peas complement both the flavor and color of the frankfurts. A platter of dinner-size frankfurts at one end, corn-on-the-cob at the other end, and fresh garden peas brightening the center will make the server proud. Add muffins, fruit salad, and an iced drink, and the meal is made!

Patty-Pan Squash With Chicken

Squash is one of the better vegetable buys just now. When made into Patty-Pan Squash, individual service filled with creamed chicken they are especially appealing and attractive.

Patty-Pan Squash—Steam six small squash until tender. Cut out tops and scoop out the pulp. Invert to drain. Cut up the pulp and cook until excess water evaporates. Melt 4 tablespoons butter in double boiler and add 6 tablespoons flour and mix well. Add 1½ cups milk and ¾ cup chicken stock gradually and cook, stirring constantly until thickened. Add 2 cups diced cooked chicken, the squash pulp, salt and pepper and heat thoroughly. Sprinkle the insides of the drained squash with salt and pepper and fill with the creamed chicken. Serves six.

Old-Time Tips On Cooking Without Sugar

SUGAR rationed, vinegar quotas cut, spices and flavorings limited by curtailed shipping—what's a cook to do? Let's turn back history's pages and take a tip from great-grandmother, who sweetened her foods with honey and maple sugar, and flavored them from garden herbs, or for a cake or pudding used the juice and peel of lemons and oranges. Martha Washington's Cookbook, recently published in a modernized form, describes many fair dishes in which sweet herbs, honeyed rose petals, candied violets and the "pills" (peels) of "orringes" and "leamons" took a prominent part.

In the present emergency many families are planting flavorful herbs in their war gardens. While modern cookery does not call for candied flowers, it does appreciate the seasoning and flavoring value of the lemon. Fortunately whatever curtailments there may be in food flavorings, there is an unlimited supply of California lemons, and the juice of this fruit with a bit of salt can be made to perform miracles in giving food that "just right" touch.

Unlike many seasonings, lemon juice also contributets a definite health value, since it is among the foremost sources of the important vitamin C, which the body does not store but requires daily, and which is best obtained in an uncooked form.

The following ways of serving lemon will add flavor and health to the daily menu:

Melon for Breakfast—Believe it or not, some foods seem sweeter for a bit of sour. Serve lemon quarters with melon and you'll find out. The lemon juice brings out the melon flavor and enhances its natural sweetness.

Hot Cakes for Breakfast—Surprise and please with this novel lemon butter spread—two parts buttter blended with one part lemon juice. (Quicker way—butter cakes and squeeze lemon over.) Sprinkle lightly with that sugar you didn't put in your coffee. A little grated lemon peel adds piquant flavor. Try this on waffles, also. You won't miss your calorie-heavy sirups.

Tender Young Carrots—Shred carrots, add raisins, lemon juice and a bit of salt; combine in a salad to delight the family's sweet tooth. The lemon juice emphasizes the sweetness of the carrots. Good additions to this salad are a sprinkle of shredded cocoanut or chopped nuts. Shredded dates may replace raisins.

Hubbard Squash—This food answers the diet "must"-er roll call for that yellow, vitamin-A vegetable you are to eat each day. Try it different this time. Parboil; add a bit of honey but not too much; bake. Serve with lemon quarters. Squeeze juice on liberally as you eat. Folks who think they don't like squash discover they do.

Tomato Juice Cocktail—Start today's lunch with this zestful drink. Be sure a lemon quarter perches on the rim of every glass. It freshens, flavors and increases vitamin C. Lemon quarters are easy to handle, and the practical garnish to use where plenty of juice is called for.

produced one serious casualty, a girl with a broken foot. Alvis quickly pointed out that she is no longer with the carnival. He indicated, generously than anyone suffering a broken neck also would be immediately disqualified.

"We take care of 'em, all right," he said.

Other injuries have included sprains and skin burns. Collapse from strain and heart pressure are not counted. They're "legal."

Afternoons Tame

The afternoons are tame. "Come at night if you really want a thrill," the man at the gate tells you. They just walk in the afternoons. It isn't until night that they try to break their bones.

Just before the "championship" knock-down race is staged the announcer challenges anyone in the audience to go through the same contortions—not for the 15 minutes required for the race, but for two minutes. "They can't all stand the grueling pace, someone is bound t ofall out," he chants. He's right, they do.

An attempt was made in 1934 to stop one of Washington's first walkathon headaches, but even then the boys in control apparently were staying just within the law. Authorities said then exactly what they say today in substance—"it's legal, just a shade within the law."

Article 17 of District police regulations contains this provision regarding places of public assembly, and dealing with licensing of same: "No person shall conduct or take part in any race or contest in which any individual shall participate for more than a total of 12 hours in any consecutive 24 hours."

In 1934 they got around this by having the schedule provide for a 15-minute rest period (as it does today) for each contestant each hour; another seven minutes for hygienic purposes, and all being given a full hour off from 11 a. m. to noon each day.

If Alvis, promoter of the 1942 edition of Walkathon, is allowing his walkers more than 15 minutes an hour off the floor, as was provided in 1934, he is complying with the police code.

But at the same time, he is not letting the crowd in on it.

If the contestants are not getting more than 15 minutes rest every hour, as advertised, they are working 18 hours out of 24 in violation of police regulations.

sition was made of a bill, the Senators, clerks, gallery occupants, sightseers, all in the Capitol, adjourned either to the House Office Building or that of the Senate.

They trooped, in solemn parades, to the building nearest them. Arriving there, they found the revolving doors to be momentary bottlenecks, but all got in, to crowd the lower corridors and stand around, for 25 minutes, reading papers and some pitching pennies.

Bolles Makes Observations

Col. Lemuel Bolles, District director of Civilian Defense, said in a statement following a tour of the downtown area during the test:

"My observation indicates a distinct improvement over the last daylight test in the degree of observance of safety rules by people generally." He said that from now on, "each individual should have in mind the probability of unannounced tests, either day or night, and accustom himself to distinguish between the ordinary sirens in daily use such as ambulances, police and fire department and the public warning horns and sirens, because in an actual raid or unannounced test this is the only notice that the public will receive."

From several quarters complaint was voiced against persons congregating in doorways, or standing inside buildings against the doors, to view the proceedings.

Col. Bolles observed: "All of these people were exposing themselves needlessly to mutilation and death as result of glass and shell splinters. There were instances of this sort this time but they were exceptions, not the rule."

"The performance of the streetcars and buses was excellent, drivers and pedestrians observed safety rules excellently," he stated. The suburbs stacked up well in the test, he asserted.

Young Elated

J. Russell Young, District Defense Coordinator, termed the test "a dandy" after a tour of the downtown area. He said, however, that the sirens could not be heard in one of the bigger downtown hotels. This raised a question about air-conditioned buildings in which windows and doors are kept tightly closed at all times. A complaint also was made that the signals were hard to hear inside of Union Station.

Inspector Harvey G. Callahan, acting police superintendent, described the alert as "reasonably successful." Cruising about, he observed people crowding into doorways and believed that further educating of the public against the practice should be undertaken.

Firemen Go to Auto Blaze

Firemen responded to an automobile fire alarm in front of 2310 California Street Northwest at 2:57 p. m. The car was said to be owned by F. L. Anderson, of 823 Twenty-fourth Street, South Arlington, Va.

The police heard complaints that the south doors of the Justice Department were locked during the test, preventing persons on the streets from entering.

The log of the test was "yellow," 2:35 p. m.; "blue," 2:50 p. m.; "red," 2:57 p. m., and "all clear," 3:22 p. m.

False Raid Alarm Recesses 3 Courts

A false air raid test alarm at 10:30 a. m. yesterday caused recessing of three courts here while three others got the same report but decided to withold action until the sirens blew.

The judges recessing were Justice James W. Morris, who was hearing arraignment of 28 persons on charges of conspiring against the morale of the armed forces; Justice Bolitha J. Laws of District Court, and Judge John P. McMahon in Traffic Court. Deciding to wait were Judge George P. Barse of the United States Branch of Municipal Court, Judge Nathan R. Margold of the D. C. Branch of Municipal Court, and Judge Walter J. Casey of the Jury Branch of the Municipal Court.

An anonymous phone call, which was responsible for the short recesses was received by W. D. Hartless, chief building air-raid warden. The caller said he spoke for "the air raid signal office."

Blackout Powers Bill Sent to White House

The Senate yesterday passed and forwarded to the White House the new District blackout bill, granting blanket defense authority to the Commissioners and authorizing the city to borrow a second million dollars for the operation of its civilian defense system.

The measure, which had been held up in Congress for several months, was passed at the request of Majority Leader Barkley after Senate District Committee Chairman McCarran had urged quick action in a telegram from the West.

Under the terms of the bill, the Board of Commissioners would become virtual "defense dictators" for the duration. They would be empowered to make whatever rules and regulations they believed necessary for defense purposes, and would have authority to requisition all types of private property.

The bill permits them to set the price to be paid for such requisitioned property, and provides that owners may accept half the fixed price and sue in court for whatever else they can get, if they feel the Commissioners' estimate is too low.

Still another section of the measure excuses the District and all defense personnel from liability arising from accidents in which the workers may be involved while on duty.

The authorization for the million-dollar loan—the city has already borrowed and spent a first million—has been declared the most urgent provision in the bill by defense officials. It was reported that several defense activities would have faced drastic curtailment soon, if the authorization had not been voted when it was.

The maintaining of guards on the Washington Aqueduct was one of such activities mentioned, and a portion of the new fund will be used for this purpose. Still another allotment, about $170,000, is scheduled for an expansion of the air raid alarm communication system.

The Senate made no changes in the bill as approved by the House.

Hopkins, Bride Leave on Trip

blue, came in on the arm of her brother-in-law, Lieut. Nicholas Ludington, as the band struck the classic strains of the Wedding March from Lohengrin. Her gown, which she designed herself, was gracefully draped and presented an attractive background for her jewels, which included a clip with diamonds set between the swirls of gold rope, with matching ear clips, a butterfly pin and two bracelets.

When the minister reached the part in the ceremony where the bridegroom puts the ring on the bride's finger, the former Mrs. Macy handed her bouquet of purple orchids to 10-year-old Diana Hopkins, daughter of the bridegroom. The ring was two bands of gold rope, matching the gold rope, diamond cluster engagement ring. Lieut. David Hopkins served as best man for his father.

Mrs. Roosevelt attended the ceremony wearing a blue and white polka dot frock. Others on hand included the bride's three aunts, Mrs. C. K. Dispham of New York City, Mrs. George B. Hazlehurst of Baltimore, and Miss Katherine Ludington of Old Lyme, Conn; Miss Gertrude Macy, sister of the bride, and another sister, Mrs. Nicholas Ludington, Mrs. David Hopkins of Los Angeles, Robert Hopkins of Fort Monmouth, N. J., and Stephen Hopkins of New York City, both sons of the bridegroom.

At Mr. Hopkins' special request, two veteran White House servants, John W. Mays, doorman, and Lizzie McDuffie, maid, attended the ceremony.

The orchestra struck up "O Promise Me" and "The End of a Perfect Day" as the guests filed out, each receiving a box containing a piece of wedding cake. The boxes were initialed "L. M.—H. L. H." Members of the two families then proceeded into the dining room for a wedding breakfast of cold salmon, hot chicken and vegetables.

It was Hopkins's third marriage and the bride's second. Her first, in 1932 to a New York attorney, Clyde Brown, ended in divorce within a year.

After a short honeymoon, the couple will make their home at the White House.

OWI Holds Up Henderson's Reply to Ickes

their views before they get to the stage of publication."

Ickes assailed Joel Dean, OPA rationing official, for indorsing Nation-wide gasoline rationing Wednesday as a means of freeing additional tank cars to increase the flow of oil and gasoline to the East. Dean said that Henderson had recommended to President Roosevelt the institution of gasoline rationing on a Nation-wide scale.

Standing on the sidelines in this interdepartmental row were the officials of the War Production Board rubber division who have been privately urging the institution of Nation-wide rationing as soon as possible as an urgently needed rubber-conservation measure.

Ickes said that the question of universal rationing to save rubber was not in his jurisdiction.

Meanwhile, Undersecretary of War Patterson told a press conference that the rubber situation was still "extremely critical" and that if essential driving is to continue, nonessential driving must be cut by more than 40 per cent. He added that the only way to cut driving mileage is by Nation-wide gasoline rationing.

Ickes also touched on the rubber situation at his press conference, revealing that the petroleum industry had succeeded in expanding the capacity to produce butadiene, synthetic rubber base, by 200,000 tons annually through slight conversions of gasoline refineries. His aides said this quick quantity of butadiene would make possible the production of 240,000 to 250,000 tons of synthetic rubber.

Newhall Takes Opposite View

Arthur B. Newhall, WPB rubber coordinator, said later that the extra production of butadiene would not increase our capacity to produce rubber beyond the 870,000 ton goal announced for 1944. Newhall explained that rubber production was now limited by the capacity of final-stage plants needed to turn the butadiene into actual synthetic. Previously, because of a shortage of butadiene, the rubber coordinator had asked the petroleum industry to devise means of securing butadiene quickly. This was done, with the resultant prospect of a flood of butadiene, a rubber division official said.

"The situation is comparable," Newhall said, "to having pans for baking bread, and then having a fellow come along and say he can get all the flour you need, and then you can make a lot more bread—while in fact you can bake no more bread than your pans will hold."

Newhall's aides admitted, however, that there were grounds for optimism in the increased butadiene because of the possibility that final-stage plants may be improved in actual operation permitting the production of some additional rubber.

As for Nation-wide rationing, Ickes held that it would not "help the East now," pointing out that all available rail tank cars had been impressed into service to bring petroleum to the East.

"It might be possible that rationing will be needed in some other areas at some future date due to transportation shortages, but that isn't the case now.

"I don't take anything out of OPA as authoritative except when Mr. Henderson speaks," Ickes added. "Every little bureau chief down the line sometimes thinks he is sitting in the driver's seat, but he seldom is. I don't think Dean is an expert either in the production or transportation of petroleum and it is very embarrassing for anyone to make a statement of that sort when he doesn't know the facts, and I don't agree with his conclusions."

Conversion Appeals Get Few Results Here

The Government's appeal to home owners to convert their oil burners to coal, if possible, to relieve the strain this winter on fuel oil was said in authoritative quarters yesterday to have produced but little results here.

Lack of response to the appeal was attributed by Lester Scott, director, Oil Heating Division, Merchants and Manufacturers Association, to a number of causes, among them the inability to get the materials required for the conversion and scarcity of workmen to make the changes.

He accredited public confusion about the extent of the scarcity as another cause. The expense was listed as another reason for the slow response. So pressed with work are many heating and plumbing concerns that in some instances even an estimate won't be given.

Sealskin, Our 'Official' Fur, Tops Middle-Priced Field

Two Shades of Brown Vie With Classic Black For Popular Favor

By Dorothy Roe
Wide World Fashion Editor

IF YOU choose an Alaska sealskin coat this winter, you'll be buying Uncle Sam's own fur. Topping the 1943 popularity list of medium-priced utility furs, Alaska sealskin is the only fur owned, controlled and sold by the United States Government.

For the last few years the sale of Alaska sealskin has grown by leaps and bounds, as craftsmen have perfected their skill in processing the supple skins, known for both serviceability and beauty. This year Alaska sealskin coats, in black and two shades of brown, deep "Safari" and neutral "Matara," will be worn by thousands of American women splurging on their fur coats, will be taken from storage and reworn by other thousands.

From Pribilof Islands

This velvety, deep-piled fur comes from the Pribilof Islands, 200 miles north of the Aleutians, crucial "stepping stones" of the war in the Pacific. Though natives recently were evacuated from the Pribilofs because of the threat of Jap invasion, the Government assures us that there is plenty of Alaska sealskin on hand for 10,000 new coats this year.

A herd of more than two million seals has been developed in the Pribilofs, a 20-fold increase over the herd of 25 years ago, when the Government gave it the protection of its new conservation policy. The seals come to the islands once a year for their breeding season. Only the bachelor bulls, around 3 years of age, are taken for their skins, and the Government allows only a limited number of these to be killed.

Processed in St. Louis

The sealskins are sent to Government agents at St. Louis, Mo., for processing and dyeing. It takes three months and 125 operations to bring the fur to its present supple beauty.

This year's Alaska sealskin coats are shown in casual, beautifully tailored styles, usually with roomy sleeves, deep armholes, in jacket, fingertip or full lengths. They range in price from around $300 to $650, with the greatest volume sold in the top brackets.

BEAUTIFULLY tailored, casually styled, with roomy sleeves and deep armholes, the new Alaska sealskin coats come in three lengths—jacket length, fingertip length and hem length—at prices ranging from $300 to $650

Man Gives Second Wife Part Ownership in His Property, Which She Now Uses as Club to Force Half Ownership; Friend Hopes to Mend Quarrel

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am making bold to ask your help for two dear friends of mine. They got married about 16 years ago. The man was a widower with children at the time. It was the first marriage for the wife. Two children have been born of this second union. But disunity commenced shortly after the first baby was born,—almost culminating in divorce. However, differences were patched up; but apparently never on a sound philosophical basis, as bickering and quarreling have continued through the years.

They are people of fairly independent means and, from the worldly viewpoint, should be very, very happy. But the contrary is the case. Yet the husband appears perfectly devoted to his family; and his entire outlook on life is predicated upon their welfare and happiness. Their immediate problem is this: Most of the real estate is in the husband's name and always has been. It so happens that trusts are now falling due on this property; and they must be renewed or the property will be lost.. The wife refuses to sign for these renewals unless she is made joint tenant in all the properties.

The husband thinks this unfair and unjust, since all of the properties were accumulated during his first marriage, in association with his first wife. He feels seriously that the children of his first wife are entitled to a share in his estate at his death. He has (I should have explained before) made his second wife joint tenant in some parcels already, in order to satisfy earlier demands. But at this time, he is devoting himself to improving his real estate holdings; and he strongly feels that if his wife were made joint tenant in all his properties, she would tie up all further improvements, by refusing to sanction any transfers, in the event profitable transactions could be engaged.

I am deeply fond of these two persons and their lovely children; and I feel sure a disinterested word of advice from you would help very much. So please be good enough to give your opinion at an early date, as the present emergency demands a quick decision. The situation is rather vaguely stated, I admit; but I cannot be more explicit concerning their personal affairs, except to say there is no triangle of any sort involved. FAMILY FRIEND.

Impasse Demands Legal Adjudication

DEAR F. F.: In other words, it is your hope that I may be able to confer "sweet reason" upon the wife. I wish I shared your confidence. Her grasping attitude toward property rights,—when dealing with her husband, whose sole interest in life (we are told) is to promote the economic security of his dependents of whom she is one,—signifies a fearsome, suspicious, jealous temperament, intrinsically resistant to logical persuasion.

It is possible that she married her husband primarily for pecuniary (and only secondarily for sentimental) reasons. Al so possible that she has, from the first, resented his (shall we say?) first-series children's claims upon him, and his warm indorsement of them. On the other hand, it is equally conceivable that he unwisely,- maybe even somewhat meanly,—disbarred her in the beginning from a reassuringly "share-and-share-alike" status in the financial department of his life. What h gives you to understand f his benevolent, protective disposition toward her may be a stealthy contradiction of the essential facts of his "inside" performance. hich is to say that she may not be without warrant in feeling she has to "fight for her rights," every inch of the way.

Even so, in my opinion, her "rights" (ethically viewed) do not extend to a half-cut (or finally determining vote) in all he owns, —inasmuch as the children of his first marriage manifestly constituted a third party, prior and morally valid claim to his personal protection at the time she wed him. Assuming that in their confidential negotiations, she has found it necessary in the past to bring grinding pressure to bear, to secure any property-holding concessions whatsoever, — still, that doesn't justify her present "highwayman" behavior, which smacks of cupidity pressing ruthless advantage. She appears to be animated solely by impatient considerations of scheming self interest; not regard for the rules of fair play.

This running fight over property is, of course, but the surface expression of a profound antagonism that exists between husband and wife,—an antagonism that probably stems (as already suggested) from e wife's jealous resentment of the man' older children, and his fond interest in them. Frustrated in her desire to wean his heart wholly away from them,—and perhaps having observed that her separationist activities have served only to drive them closer together,—she is now, in all likelihood, trying to "undercut" them by the financial approach.

The urrent critical impasse requires immediate legal adjudication, it seems to me, if the long-term interests of all (husband, wife and both sets of children) are to be intelligently safeguarded. If they can fix on one mutually acceptable legal advisor,—fine. If they cannot get together even on that, then each should choose his own lawyer, and let the two attorneys draft an equitable compromise plan of property management (and title-holding), for them to abide by hereafter.

Actress Tells How to Lop Off 50 Pounds

By Ida Jean Kain

WHEN AN actress has to keep slim or stop eating—as Benay Venuta expresses it—she works out a system. And the system has to be good.

Miss Venuta avers she is just the one to tell you all about diets because she has tried all of them. To begin with, she tipped the scales at 140 pounds when she was 15 years old. She was off to a bad start. By 18, the scales hovered around 200, and she decided things had gone far enough.

Her first attempt to reduce was on the liquid diet. "There is nothing that sends you back to overeating faster than a three-day liquid diet," she says. "Tell them it's a snare and a delusion." Then she tried pineapple and lamp chop diet. And what does that do? "Well, you lose your appetite, but only for pineapple and lamb chops. You suddenly develop a positive craving for everything else."

Balanced Reducing Menu

She took a fling at the high protein diets, too. But while she did not feel hungry on those menus, she didn't feel very well. "I decided there weren't enough fruits and vegetables and that is how I stumbled on the only good diet there is—the balanced reducing menu."

She kept the calories at approximately 1200 and the menus high in lean meat, milk, eggs and cheese, but added green vegetables, green salads, fruits, fruit juices and tomato juice with yeast tablets. This has been her eating plan for several years now and she feels fine and recommends it to all who have a time keeping slim.

Walks for Exercise

Miss Venuta brought her weight down to 150 pounds, which is about right for her height of 5 feet 8 inches. And she slimmed down from a size 20 to a 16. What about exercise? She doesn't take calisthenics, never has, and never intends to! But she walks 5 miles a day and adds, "and by walking, I don't mean window shopping!"

Overattentive Hosts Often Give Guests the Jitters

SOME HOSTESSES are so anxious to give their guests pleasure that they make them uncomfortable instead.

Before the party they give so much thought and time to china, silver and menu that they are worn out before their friends arrive.

After it begins they flutter around like nervous butterflies that never seems to light. They try to replenish drinks every five minutes, keep passing hors d'oeuvres plates, jump up to empty ash trays or get more ice.

At dinner they are concerned lest the steak is too rare or the cheese too ripe. And after coffee is served they find it almost impossible to let everybody relax with cigarettes and good talk. Instead they keep up a running fire of suggestions. Bridge? Puzzles? Games?

On weekends they plan an activity for every minute—never think of leaving a guest a pleasant hour or two alone.

They forget that the truest courtesies a hostess can give her guest (after a warm welcome) are a pleasant, peaceful atmosphere, quiet poise and a chance to be himself.

Clubs

How Texas C. A. R. Treats Soldiers

By Genevieve Reynolds
The Post Club Editor

WHEN A SOLDIER arrives in Fort Worth, Tex., there is someone on hand—usually a pretty girl—to show him the city. Organizing sightseeing tours for service men is one war contribution that the club women do especially well. So reports Mrs. William Hall, president of the senior group, Children of the American Revolution of Fort Worth.

In town for a few days with her husband and two daughters, Betty and Rosanna, Mrs. Hall is looking over the women's clubs defense projects in Washington. She's checking to see if she can find additional ideas for her C. A. R. group back home.

Now busily knitting and wrapping bandages for the Red Cross, the members of the Fort Worth C. A. R. are planning to start serving the soldiers doughnuts and coffee at the U. S. O. lounge in the Texas Hotel of that city. Also, they are busy collecting funds to aid the National C. A. R. in buying a fully equipped ambulance for the Red Cross, according to Mrs. Hall.

As for Fort Worth clubwomen in general, they have gone all-out for war activities. "Some are working for the Red Cross, others in the U. S. O.," she said. "Still others are doing special services needed in the area."

Recently the Barnaby Club, an exclusive dance organization, requested that each member bring two soldiers to the dance. "What's more, the privates were invited the same as the officers," said Mrs. Hall, who thinks that many nice privates are overlooked in the rush to favor the officers of the various branches.

Girl Scouts Aid Again

ANYTHING TO AID the war effort—that seems to be the flexible policy of the District of Columbia Girl Scouts. A group of intermediate and senior Scouts will package red feathers for the Community War Fund during the entire month of August, beginning tomorrow.

The National Anthem

"THE STAR-SPANGLED BANNED"—the national anthem—and its author, Francis Scott Key, will be featured at the fourth broadcast program of the Janet Montgomery Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, tomorrow at 10:15 a. m. over Station WINX. This is the anniversary of the birth of Francis Scott Key, and will be celebrated by the chapter with 15 minutes of song and story. Mrs. Joseph F. Betterley, chapter radio chairman, arranged the program.

The chapter presents as guest artists Dorothy Remington, soprano, and William Webster, tenor, leading singers of Covent Garden Opera Co. of London, and their accompanist, Beatrice Sarquhaison. Between professional engagements in the United States, they are residing in Washington.

AIR COOLED LANSBURGH'S

BLACKOUT—

Etiquette During Air Raids Is Already On 'Tradition' Basis in Hawaii

You've probably never heard of "blackout etiquette," but that's because this is not Hawaii and we have never lived through the raid on Pearl Harbor.

But, according to Nancy Shea, whose home was at Hickam Field where her husband, Col. Augustine Francis Shea, made his headquarters, a definite code of "blackout conduct" has grown up in the once-bombed islands. Rule number one is to always carry your own once-bombed islands. Rule number one is to always carry your own luau on the beach. Next necessity to be the perfect blackout guest is to have your own first aid kit with you. On the etiquette "musts" for a blackout host is to arrange your gatherings so that your guests may be on a homeward trek when the quick twilight of the tropics comes.

NANCY SHEA

Mrs. Shea, author of "The Army Wife," and co-author with Mrs. Briscoe Tye, wife of Vice Admiral Tye, of "The Navy Wife," answered questions about the blackout of the once gay islands and many other queries about her personal experiences during the December 7 raid, at the tea given in her honor yesterday. Hosts at the 4:30 to 6 o'clock gathering, which took place in the garden of the Alva Belmont House, were Mrs. Frederick A. Ballard and Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley.

Civilian Cooperation 'Was Marvelous'

"The cooperation of the civilians was marvelous," said Mrs. Shea, who was evacuated from Hawaii on Christmas Day. "They took the refugees into their homes and everyone did what he could to help. Even the lei sellers went to work washing dishes at Iolani Palace. There were many real heroes born that day—but their stories will probably never be known. No one need be anything but proud of the actions of our armed forces there under the stress of the surprise attack."

"Civilians were constantly on the lookout for a way to help the men in uniform," observes Mrs. Shea as she goes on to tell her favorite story of one service man who was "protected" by an Hawaiian policeman. An extremely young ensign plunged across a street in the midst of heavy traffic. A huge Hawaiian officer of the law rushed after him, literally picked him up and carried him to the safety of the sidewalk. After setting the youthful officer down and giving him time to adjust his dignity, the Hawaiian remarked, "We have to look out for men like you, sir. We need you, sir."

Mrs. Shea Will Write About WAACs

Here for a few days as the house guest of her cousin, Mrs. Ballard, Mrs. Shea will leave shortly for New England where she will spend the rest of the summer. From there she will go to Des Moines, Iowa, to watch the first class of WAAC's graduate and study their organization. She will return to Washington the middle of September to get to work on a book she has been commissioned to write on the WAACs. It will be called "Women in Khaki."

Ten Senators Among Guests At Dinner

Senators were definitely in the majority—ten in all—at Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean's dinner last night at Friendship. In contrast to her other dinners, where legal lights often shine, there was not a Supreme Court Justice in sight; but they were not missed in a gathering that featured a record number of celebrities.

The owner of the Hope Diamond had gathered in an interesting group of out of town guests to supplement her dinner list of 100 in all. A few diplomats, including the Brazilian Ambassador and Mme. Martins, were there as were the Swiss Minister and Mme. Bruggman and the British Minister, Noel Hall. Three Representatives and their wives were in the throng.

Myron Taylor, former United States special envoy to the Vatican, who is in Washington on a fleeting visit, was there last night as were former Minister to Bulgaria and Mrs. George Earle, down from Pennsylvania; Mrs. Sherman Miles, wife of General Miles, who had come here from Boston and is the guest of Mrs. McLean; Douglas Parmentier, editor of Harpers Magazine, here from New York; Mrs. Adela Rogers St. John, Countess de Martino arrived with the Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Thurman Arnold; Dale Arden, a singer from New York City; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hoff of Baltimore, and their house-guests, Mr. and Mrs. Hilleary Gans.

DAN CUPID—

Wears a Navy Badge These Days; Two More Ensigns Take Brides

Navy men around the Capital seem to be playing follow-the-leader these days. Since that famous nuptial day at Annapolis this year when the graduating class, for the first time unfettered by the ban against marrying within two years of graduation, lined up at the academy chapel almost en masse to take to themselves the ladies of their choice, scarcely a day has gone by without several naval officers becoming benedicts.

Last night Ensign Robert Gooding was married to Miss Mary Joyce Waller and Lieut. (j. g.) B. Kearns Beaver exchanged vows with Miss Edith Randolph Hood.

Ladd-Linscott Troth Told

A Marine colonel's daughter will become the bride of a Marine colonel's son, according to an announcement made by Col. Shaler Ladd, U. S. M. C., and Mrs. Ladd of the engagement of their daughter, Louise Bendette Ladd, and Ensign Henry D. Linscott. The latter is the son of Col. H. D. Linscott, U. S. M. C., and Mrs. Linscott.

The bride-elect was graduated from the University of Maryland in June. She is a member of Delta Delta Delta sorority and Omicron Nu honorary fraternity.

Ensign Linscott was graduated from the University of Missouri in 1941. He is a member of Sigma Chi and Kappa Tau Alpha. Until recently he was on duty here at the Navy Department.

No date has been set for the wedding.

St. Paul's Church in Alexandria, Va., was the scene of the wedding of Miss Mary Joyce Waller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Page Waller of Alexandria, and Ensign Robert Carpenter Gooding, son of Mrs. Robert F. Gooding and the late Mr. Gooding of Alexandria. The Rev. Percy Foster Hall officiated at the 8 o'clock ceremony.

Wears Lace Veil Lent by Cousin

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a torso gown of white satin cut on simple lines and made with a V neckline. Her full-length antique lace veil was lent to her by her cousin, Mrs. Charles S. Smith of Long Island. Her shower bouquet was of roses and bouvardia.

The maid of honor and only attendant, Miss Virginia B. Coryell, carried a sheaf of yellow roses. Her dress of turquoise chiffon was trimmed with metallic lace. Ensign George Robbins Brown, U. S. N. R., served as best man and the ushers were Lieut. Addison Merry, A. U. S., C. Page Waller and John P. Waller, brothers of the bride, and Wilmer J. Waller, a cousin of the bride.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents on Linden Street. Assisting were Mrs. Cyril Jewell, Mrs. H. J. Waller, Miss Delia Phillips, Mrs. Thomas F. Knox and Mrs. Luther A. Gilliam.

The bride attended school in Washington and her husband was graduated from the United States Naval Academy with the class of 1942.

Beaver-Hood Rites At All Saints Church

Last night's other service wedding, that of Miss Edith Randolph Hood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Hood of Chevy Chase, Md., to Lieut. (j.g.) B. Kearns Beaver, son of Mrs. R. E. Beaver and the late Mr. Beaver of Danville, Pa., took place in the All Saints Episcopal Church on Chevy Chase Circle. The Rev. Henry Teller Cocke officiated.

A seed pearl coronet held the bride's full-length veil which fell over her severe white satin gown. Her bouquet was a shower of white orchids, stephanotis and baby's breath. The bride was given in marriage by her father.

The maid of honor was Miss Nancy Ellicott Davis, who wore a frock of rose crepe and a Juliet cap of seed pearls. Her flowers were pink snapdragons and blue delphinium. The junior bridesmaids, Miss Anne Carter and Miss Barbara Flynn, carried old-fashioned nosegays to set off their rose marquisette frocks.

Ensign J. P. Moray, U. S. N. R., of Chicago was the best man and the ushers were a group of the bridegroom's classmates.

The bride, who made her debut here in 1939, attended Gunston Hall, Mount Vernon Seminary and the Corcoran School of Art. Her husband was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1940.

IN THE Capital Spotlight

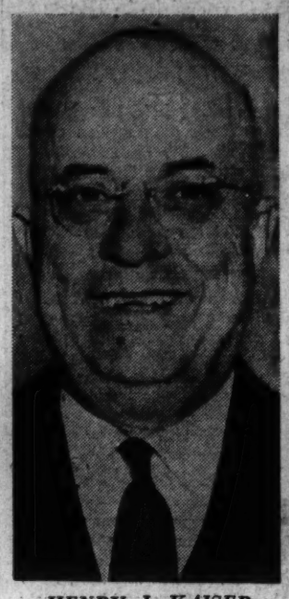
By Hope Ridings Miller

Presenting: A Modern Miracle Man

"WE'RE GOING INTO the air," declared Henry J. Kaiser, with an upward wave of his hands, "and we might as well get started."

So far as everybody who heard him was concerned—we were up there already . . . and had been almost an hour. For the West Coast shipbuilding wizard, who now proposes to build 5000 mammoth flying boats a year in nine converted shipyards, has a way of getting his pet theories across, almost before you have time to know what they're all about.

At a two-hour press conference yesterday in his suite at the Shoreham, Kaiser took time out to explain his ideas and elaborate his plans to a corps of newspaperwomen, who hung on every word, and put in quite a few themselves.



HENRY J. KAISER

But for the presence of one newspaperman (and nobody seemed to know how he got there) and three members of his own staff, it was an all-gal gathering. Seems that yesterday morning when Kaiser was en route to the National Press Club, where he was to be guest speaker, two women reporters approached him with a couple of leading questions.

"Mr. Kaiser, you're going to the men's press club to make a speech—what about holding a press conference for women later?"

"We've got a lot of things we want to ask you," put in the other; "what about it?"

"Well, what about it?" he shot back with a grin. "Sure you can have a press conference. Get your bunch together and I'll see you at the Shoreham around 2:30."

At 2:25 there wasn't a seat left in the spacious living room of his hotel suite. Ten minutes later the West Coast shipbuilder, who's all for getting going into the air as soon as possible, coasted in, waved a greeting to everybody, took a chair in the middle of the room . . . and started talking. Two hours later, he was still full speed ahead, and had everybody along with him.

Through his gold-rimmed spectacles, the maritime miracle man seemed to look beyond the horizon familiar to most of us, and to envision flying boats for the future that will serve either in time of war or in time of peace. ("It's peace we're really preparing for," he said, "but we've got a war to win first").

A big man, with a big smile and a crescent of gray hair around his bald dome, Kaiser talked only in positive terms. "If" and "can't" are two words he never uses and consistently disregards. ("They oughtn't be in anybody's vocabulary.") As he sees the problem of winning the war—and he sees everything as a problem that can be solved—"It's just another challenge to everyone of us . . . That's what America was built on . . . And it's on that basis it will survive."

In his opinion the giant cargo airplane is the only answer to the German submarine. And he has a stack of notebooks, filled with plans, illustrations and detailed instructions as to how his idea of mass production can begin practice "in ten months . . . if I could start today."

The Mars, recently completed by the Glenn L. Martin Co., he mentioned as a 70-ton aircraft that is at least a beginning in a skyway project which can develop into production of thousands of flying boats every year. In this connection he pointed out that much as he would like to do so, he couldn't take credit for the original conception of giant cargo-carrying airplanes. "My job," he said, "is to get them built as quickly as possible . . . and big as possible."

Just how big, he declined to say, but such figures as "200 tons" and "300 tons" were tossed around lightly . . . and there was a thick black book crammed with illustrations of one huge craft that would make a flying fortress look like a Taylor Cub.

In Washington for a series of conferences, Kaiser hopes he'll get the green light before he leaves. He has settled down at the Shoreham for an indefinite stay and will be joined here in a few days by Mrs. Kaiser, who is now in New York. ("She always goes where I go," he said fondly.)

Why aren't we getting the war job done more quickly? Well, Kaiser has an answer for that one, too. Industrialists are partially to blame, "and I guess you'd call me an industrialist, too," said the man who is the guiding force in at least 50 enormous corporate enterprises in a score of different fields.

"Most industrialists," he went on, "have thus far failed to realize that Washington is not a place to come to ask for something. It's a place to find out what is needed. None of us can get anything done here unless we work together. As I see it, these flying cargo ships are the great need now. At least, they're one anchor to windward."

Of Eddie Rickenbacker's objection to his pet project, Kaiser said it "disturbed" him because "it doesn't make sense."

"Disturbed?" Well, maybe that wasn't the word, he went on. "Actually, it agitates me."

But being agitated to action is, apparently, what Henry J. Kaiser enjoys most.

Sonja Lie, Knut Thommessen Are Married in New York

New York, N. Y., July 30.—A former press department member of the Norwegian Embassy in Washington, Miss Sonja Lie today became the bride of Knut Thommessen of Oslo, Norway The ceremony took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herman S. Kiaer at 5 o'clock with the Rev. Alson H. Robinson officiating.

The bride is the daughter of the late Jonas Lie, former president of the National Academy of Design, and the late Mrs. Lie. Her bridal costume was of ice-blue satin worn with a pale blue tulle veil which was held with a small crown of oak leaves in blue velvet and she carried a bouquet of sweetheart roses. Miss Jean Erb was maid of honor and Dr. Edvard Hambro acted as best man. A small reception followed.

Mrs. Thommessen attended Le Lierre School in Paris and made her debut in 1936. The bridegroom, who has been secretary in the Norwegian Ministry of Foreign Affairs in London for the past year is now in New York on a special mission and will return to London with his bride in the near future. He was graduated from Oslo University and studied law in London and Vienna. Later he was attached to the legations in Warsaw and Montreal.

Here From England

Just arrived from England are Sir Robert and Lady Sinclair, who have taken an apartment at the Shoreham. Sir Robert is chief deputy to Sir Oliver Littleton on the combined production and resources board. In England, Lady Sinclair was very active in work with the famous Euston Station and the Y. M. C. A. canteen for Allied troops in London. She hopes to continue her war work after getting settled here.

Noted Frenchman Here for Visit

Prof. Henri Laugier, newly appointed vice chairman of France Forever, was the guest in whose honor Adrien Tixier, De Gaulle's special representative here, and Mme. Tixier entertained at dinner last evening.

In Washington for a few days, Professor Laugier came here from New York where he has been for several weeks. He is on the faculty of the University of Montreal, as professor of biology and physiology of labor. He formerly was a professor at the Sorbonne and has served in the Ministry of Justice in his homeland.

With the late Jean Perrin, Nobel Prize winner, Professor Laugier founded and was a director of the National Center of Scientific Research for National Defense in France.

Mr., Mrs. Hubert Phipps In Florida for Duration

Palm Beach, Fla., July 30.—"There is plenty of war work to be done here," reports Mrs. Hubert Phipps of New York and Virginia, who with her husband recently leased a cottage here. They expect to be in Florida for the duration.

Mrs. Phipps is planning to join up with the canteen workers, as they are short of help. Her husband is waiting for his 34-foot boat to be overhauled before starting on his patrol job.

Mrs. Phipps reports they have been to Miami, where they called on Mrs. Archie Cary Randolph, jr., formerly of Middleburg, who is living there with her daughter, Rebecca Ann Dulany, while her husband is flying freight and passengers from Miami to South America and to Africa.

Better Luck, Next Time

A major industrialist who withheld his name told this one on his plant police force: Warned about saboteurs, they were on their toes when a couple of men were seen looking around the plant. Collaring them, they hustled the pair to jail, where the two suspects produced credentials. They were Federal agents, also on the alert for saboteurs.

A Cryptic Message

Local Board No. 12 has received the following communication from a registrant who had been placed in Class III-A: "My wife has left me and said she would not come back, so I am sending you my card. I guess you know what to do."

The Federal Diary

Editor's note: Archibald MacLeish, Librarian of Congress and assistant director of the new Office of War Information, writes the Federal Diary today in the absence of Jerry Kluttz. Kluttz will return August 4.

By Archibald MacLeish

One of the queerest of contemporary notions is the notion, earnestly propagated by certain elements of the press, that Washington is somehow different from the rest of the country and alien to it—a bureaucracy or a Congress which the people should watch with suspicion and perhaps with actual mistrust.

The fact is that Washington these days is more like America than America itself. It is filled with America—filled and over-filled to overflowing with America. There are more Americans—more kinds of Americans—more samples of Americans in Washington than there are anywhere else on earth. There are Americans from all the towns, Americans from all the trades. And the towns and the trades know it if the newspapers don't.

They Are the People

Who are these Congressmen and Senators who are to be set up in apparent distinction from the American people?

They are the American people. They are the people's representatives in Congress elected by the people and acting in the people's behalf. Like the people whom they represent they are men of varying degrees of ability, varying and various opinions. Some of them are men of great distinction. Some are not. Some are men of an intelligence as fine and as responsive as any to be found in America. Some are men of less intelligence. Some are men remarkable for courage and character. Some are not remarkable for any reason. But one thing true of them all as they constitute Congress of the United States: are the true representatives of people whom they represent and more like the people, far er to the people, much more ly entitled to speak for the peo- than those who undertake to at- k them on the people's behalf.

To Get the Job Done

What is true of the Congress is true also of the alleged bureaucracy. Who are these bureaucrats? The tens and scores and hundreds of American businessmen and American lawyers and American scientists and American engineers who are working in Washington at $6500 or $5600 or $3800 a year, living in hot rooms in back hotels and maybe a night of their wives every seven weeks with their kids forgetting their faces? And for what? For cash? For fame? Or to get the job done?

The stereotyped phrases about the Washington bureaucracy and the Congress are stereotypes pure and simple. There is no such Washington. What there actually is is a city filled with American citizens—American citizens from all over, from every State—American citizens like other American citizens—American citizens who have closed their offices, turned their business over, locked up their laboratories and their shops, said goodby to their wives and gone to work in the most uncomfortable, overcrowded city in the United States at half or a fifth or a hundredth of their civilian incomes—gone to work at low pay in the worst climate on the continent with no more hope or expectation of recognition or reward than a stevedore has on the night shift.

That's your bureaucracy. It stares at you every night from the lighted windows still lit at 10 and 11 and 12 in Lend-Lease, in the War Department, the Treasury, OPA, WPB, the House Office Building, the Senate Office Building, even, forgive me, the Library. It stares at you every morning in the long lines of cars on Memorial Bridge at 8 and 7:30 and 7 and on back. That's your bureaucratic Washington. And the marvel is that the Washington correspondents, the ablest correspondents of the ablest press on earth, have never written the story.

An evening clinic for the control of venereal disease will open Monday at 5 p. m. at Freedman's Hospital, and will be held thereafter on Mondays, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays from 5 to 7 p. m., Dr. George C. Ruhland, District Health Officer, announced yesterday.

Ruhland stated the purpose of the clinic will be to provide the opportunity for people working during the day to benefit from the District's health program. Heretofore, Ruhland pointed out, the only public clinic for persons unable to pay a private physician has been the Southwest Health Center, Delaware Avenue and I Street Southwest.

Individual Phones to Be Put On Party Lines, Official Says

W. W. Wheeler, assistant to the vice president of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., declared yesterday that because of the shortage of materials many telephone projects have been abandoned, and that in the future individual phone lines would be converted into party lines.

Speaking at a luncheon at the Cosmopolitan Club, Wheeler said that until all essential phone services are established no new telephone services would be made available to those persons not connected directly with the essential war activities. He advised that to aid the telephone company and the war effort, persons making calls do so with discretion, and not to linger and gossip over the wire. In making long distance calls, he said, it would facilitate service if such calls were limited to the "necessary."

He pointed out that the telephone companies have been able to conserve critical materials by using such substitutes as plastics, thereby releasing a considerable amount of aluminum. "We also are making savings in zinc, nickel, lead, steel, magnesium, rubber, silk, tin, etc.," he declared. "It has been possible to make some savings in the use of copper, used by the company for electrical conductors, and for which metal no substitute has yet been found."

Navy to Post Guards On Air Station Buses

Armed guards will be posted regularly on one brief stretch of District bus lines, when the Anacostian-Congress Heights line is continued into the grounds of the Naval Air Station, the Public Utilities Commission announced last night.

Petitions from the commanding officer of the field for extension of the line were granted only upon provision that the guards would be stationed on the vehicles to check credentials of persons entering and leaving the grounds. The commanding officer accepted the responsibility of denying exit or entrance to the field, and the transit company was authorized to adopt reasonable regulations on its liability to persons taken on its buses into the station.

Raid Warden's Auto Stolen During Test Alert

Oliver F. Beach, of 1237 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, assistant deputy air raid warden of the Mid-city area, reported to police that during the test alarm yesterday his car, parked in the 1300 block of Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, containing fire watchers' equipment, was stolen.

Beach said the theft netted 50 whistles, 242 fire watchers manuals and six helmets, which he was delivering to fire watchers in his area, occurred while he was in a building pursuing his duties.

'Disaster Technique' Course Begins Monday

A ten-day training course in "disaster technique" is to begin Monday in the United States Chamber of Commerce Building, Connecticut Avenue and H Street Northwest, with 300 social workers from public and private agencies in attendance, District Welfare Director Conrad Van Hyning announced yesterday.

Purpose of the course, Van Hyning said, is to instruct the social workers, all of whom volunteered to attend, in caring for persons who may be bombed out of their homes and have to take refuge in shelters or billets. The course is to be under the direction of the District Red Cross, with Miss Carolyn Flanders in charge.

Van Hyning added that plans for sheltering incipient bomb victims are still in abeyance, but when completed will be supervised by Randolph Bishop, OCD billeting officer. Financing is to be provided by the Red Cross, the District Welfare Department and the OCD, and possibly with additional aid from the Federal Security Agency.

As a preliminary to inauguation of the course, those enrolled are to meet in the Department of Agriculture Auditorium tomorrow at 2 p. m., to hear a general outline of the course and its aims. Speakers at this meeting will be Col. Lemuel Bolles, District Civilian Defense director; Miss Josephine Brown, chairman of the Family Security Committee, Civilian Mobilization Unit, and Van Hyning, who also is chairman of the Civilian Mobilization Unit for the District.

Civic Group Backs Undertakers' Bill

A bill pending in Congress which would require licensing of all undertakers in the District was approved last night by the Federation of Civic Associations meeting in Garnett-Patterson Junior High School.

The unit also recommended that while the bill is pending, the District Commissioners fix a license fee for the undertakers.

In an effort to aid in the tire shortage, the organization urged that automobile associations here adopt a program whereby children would collect bottles thrown on the city's streets. It also urged Negroes to enlist in the United States Marine Corps and Navy, as those two branches are now open to Negroes wishing to volunteer for service.

D. C. Legion Hears War Critics Flayed

Johnson of ICC Advises Leaving Strategy to Nation's Chosen Leaders

Curbstone "generals" who try to tell this Nation how to run the war were bitterly criticized last night by J. Monroe Johnson, Interstate Commerce Commissioner, in an address before the opening convention session of the American Legion, Department of the District of Columbia, at Uline's Arena. At the same time, Johnson urged all Americans—soldiers, Legionnaires and just plain citizens—to support the leaders of our country.

"As this war goes on," Johnson said, "many of you here will be tempted to write to the President, Admiral King, General Marshall and Admiral Leahy telling them of their errors and how to win the war. And right here I'd like to say that I have utmost contempt for the man who rocks on his heels on a curbstone preaching what should be done in this war. When any of you see that happen, just give him a swift kick in the pants."

Waggaman Speaks

Preceding Johnson on the rostrum, Maj. Ennals Waggaman, national commander in chief of the Military Order of the World War, told the Legionnaires:

"We are fighting this war today because we didn't finish the last one. Let's be sure in this one we'll make a good job of it. Let's be sure when we finish it, there will be no more Hitlers, Mussolinis or Hirohitos."

Johnson, however, took issue with Major Waggaman, saying:

"I disagree with Major Waggaman. We finished the last war on the battlefields of France. Victory was lost by politicians and statesmen of the world. Yet, I find no fault with politics, no criticism. This Nation was founded on it."

Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of Selective Service, paid tribute to the legion, to the local draft board members who have sent nearly four million men into the service and indicated that compulsory military service would be in effect in this country after the war is over. He said:

"Let us see that in the future the youth of this Nation will be prepared physically and mentally to meet any emergency that may arise."

Other Speakers

Other speakers were Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, Col. Lemuel Bolles, District director of civilian defense; Richard O'Brien, grande chef de gare, Grand Voiture 174, Forty and Eight; Mrs. Margaret Carroll, president American Legion Auxiliary; Mrs. Virginia McCarthy, Le Chapeau Department, Eight and Forty, and Thomas Owen, of Alabama, national historian, American Legion. Department Commander Heywood N. Saunders presided.

The convention will close tomorrow night. Today's session will begin at 6 p. m. and tomorrow's at 2 p. m. At the final session a new commander will be elected. Three candidates are in the field. They are Charles Kohhen, past commander of Cooley-McCullough Post; William Brennan, vice commander and past commander of Bunker Hill Post, and Patrick Fitzgibbons, past commander of Victory Post.

OPA Extends Stay of Tire Firm's Suspension

The Office of Price Administration yesterday extended until Monday night its stay of the 60-day suspension of the new tire business of the Alfred Stidham Tire Co., 1336 Fourteenth Street Northwest, to give the company time to prepare additional evidence for presentation to OPA.

The company which was charged with selling new tires to persons who did not have rationing certificates maintained yesterday that circumstances "peculiar" to the case made the OPA suspension order an unfair and unduly harsh penalty. The suspension was originally scheduled to go into effect Wednesday.

Coolidge String Quartet Well Received at Starlight Concert

C. C. Cappel and the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation in the Library of Congress present the Coolidge String Quartet (William Kroll, Leon Rudin, David Dawson and Naoum Benditzki) in Meridian Hill Park on Thursday night. Program: Quartet in B flat major, Op. 18, No. 6 (Beethoven), Quartet on Negro Themes, Op. 19 (Daniel Gregory Mason), Quartet in C minor, Op. 51, No. 1 (Brahms).

Making their second appearance of the summer last evening at the twelfth starlight chamber music concert in Meridian Hill Park, William Kroll and his associates of the Coolidge String Quartet were heard by an audience more nearly commensurate with their merits. When they played on Monday night, they were so unfortunate as to be in unwilling rivalry with the postponed final concert of the National Symphony Orchestra which had the major claims upon the attention of the public. This time there was no such hazard of fortune, and the artists were very cordially received by a large concourse of listeners.

BROWN

Between works of Beethoven and Brahms, the visitors presented the most interesting composition listed in both their programs—Daniel Gregory Mason's Quartet on Negro Themes. About what constitutes interest in music there can be no more dispute than about taste, but Dr. Mason's work was the most interesting to me because it is American music, because it is infrequently heard, and because it contains a problem in the psychology of music. It is excellently written, poetically motivated, and addressed to discriminating minds. The music has indubitable charm and intellectual vitality, and yet it illustrates a curious dichotomy between matter and manner.

The quartet is based upon melodies of Negro spirituals which are utilized with a sophistication foreign to them. Dr. Mason was well aware of the discrepancy after he had composed the work and listened to it with critical attention. In his reminiscenes, he frankly admits that he saw "a lack of complete correspondence between the temperament of the composer and the material of the composition."

Going farther into the subject, he said: "The material was scarcely complex enough for me or I was scarcely simple enough for it—put it eighter way you choose. One result was that I coupled highly primitive tunes with more complex elements of style assimilated from elsewhere, with which they discorded. Ten years later, completely revising the quartet, I came with almost a physical jolt upon 'Deep River,' most essentially simple of tunes, harmonized with the luxurious sliding 'ninth chords' of the sybaritic Debussy. I struck out that passage. But there were others I could not strike out without striking out the quartet."

The concert began with Beethoven's B flat major quartet from Opus 18, one of the weak members of that set of six. Of Beethoven's essential qualities, as we now know them, it contains only a few traces—in the "Melancholy" prelude to the last movement, and possibly in the melodic form of the slow movement. Elsewhere it is sound quartet writing of that period without any particular individuality. The third work on the program was the first published quartet of Brahms, a mature work released after he had tried his hand on a score of quartets and destroyed the manuscripts. Thoroughly Brahmsian in feeling and idiom, it is too familiar to need any comments.

Transit Co. Opposes Bus Revision Plan

Changes Would Only Inconvenience Public, Asserts Company's Report

The Capital Transit Co., turned thumbs down yesterday on Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer's proposed revision of bus routes, which Van Duzer claimed would save the Transit Company an annual $3,500,000, besides immeasurable quantities of gasoline and tires.

In a 12-page, charted set of comments, the transit company set forth in general that Van Duzer's basic idea, to save gas and rubber and expense by eliminating duplication of services, is fallacious because the buses taken off one route could not be stored up in parking lots, but would have to be put on the paralleling route to take care of the resultant additional loads. In effect the changes would mostly result only in the passengers having to walk farther to ride the same buses formerly on nearer routes.

For example, Van Duzer claimed that forcing the Arnold bus lines servicing Arlington to stop in Rosslyn rather than coming on into the District would save the Arnold lines 385,000 miles annually.

Would Entail Augmentation

The transit company, which might have been expected to welcome this ruling for the additional passengers it would have brought to its Rosslyn and Georgetown lines, instead pointed out: "Most of this saving will not be secured if service over the present parallel route via Memorial Bridge is augmented in proportion to the demand."

The proposals for the elimination of the Twenty-second and Shepherd line was "strongly opposed" by the transit company, which points out that most of the saving Van Duzer predicted 'would have to be added back in augmentation" of other services. Beyond question, the transit company stated, "the change would seriously inconvenience the public."

While agreeing that the Queens Chapel Road service could be curtailed to some economy, the company also objected to complete elimination of this line.

The use of the old polo field and driveways in the Mall for parking space for buses in off-hours would be acceptable to the company, which claimed, however, that this would involve some financial loss to itself. As to the proposal that the municipal parking spaces behind the District Building and the Municipal Center be turned over, for some rental, to the transit company for storing its buses, the company declared that it did not feel it should be required to rent space when this would add to the cost of service.

Approves Two Proposals

Of the 32 major reroutings of bus lines proposed by Van Duzer, the transit company approved only two without reservation and agreed with three if drastic reservations were made. Of the rest of the proposals, its judgments were "strongly disapproves," "seriously questions the wisdom," "not in the public interest" or "seriously objects."

To the transit company the report as a whole "shows that many of these changes, while physically possible, would materially and unnecessarily reduce the quality of service now rendered, would inconvenience large numbers of patrons without providing material savings in bus mileage, and in fact would not save the miles shown on Page 1 of the recommendations."

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

St. Louis, July 30.—For no reason at all, the Nats have been encountering some success on their current Western trip. Recent triumphs of Bucky Harris' club, 7 victories in 11 games with the Tigers, Indians and Browns, pose a first-class mystery. It doesn't add up.

POVICH

The Nats don't have any power. Their infield is the worst in the league, Dutch Leonard hasn't pitched a game since April, and it is a team that could make seven errors in one game, as it did the other day, and astonish nobody. Yet they've been winning ball games. The Nats are a great argument for the vagaries of baseball.

The other day when the Browns scored ten runs, the weak-hitting Nats slugged out 20 hits and beat 'em. The day before, the Nats made seven errors and a couple of others that weren't charged against 'em, and won easily, despite themselves. In Cleveland, they had the bases filled with none out in two different innings and couldn't score, yet wound up winning the ball game in the thirteenth.

There is never a dull moment with the Nats, despite their faults. It appeared that Bucky Harris was conceding the game to the Browns the other day when, with two out his club two runs behind, he put in Bob Repass as a pinch hitter. Repass had just been benched a few days before because he couldn't hit. So he slugged out a pinch two-bagger and got the two tying runs home.

But Bucky Harris has reason to shudder at the thought of going through another season with the same crew. He has Roy Cullenbine, an outfielder, playing third base alongside two rookies, Johnny Sullivan and Ellis Clary, who are only two jumps out of the sandlots. And lately, Mickey Vernon, his first baseman has taken to fumbling ground balls at a horrible rate. Harris has all the elements of a last-place club, and why he isn't deep in last place he really doesn't know.

Four men have been carrying the club on their backs during the Western swing. They are George Case, who is on a hitting spree and is stealing bases like never before; Stan Spence who has clouted his way into second place in the batting race; Alex Carrasquel, the good senor from Venezuela, who has won his last four starts; and Sid Hudson who has finally steadied down to some good pitching after some horrible experiences.

Otherwise the Nats are a pretty dismal outfit. Jake Early has improved vastly as a catcher, but his hitting, once his best asset, has fallen away to a still hush. Mickey Vernon is acting like a sucker for anybody who will throw him an outside pitch and is chasing bad balls all over the league. Clary has the second base job simply by default, and the same goes for Sullivan at shortstop. In right field there is Bruce Campbell or Bobby Estalella, both of whom the Nats would sell at the waiver price.

The most painful sight to Harris has been the spectacle of his Washington infield trying to make a double play. It ought to be in the butchery business, because it has all the elements of a first-class abbatoir. At that, they're probably forgiveable. Cullenbine, an outfielder all his life, never pretended to be a third baseman at any time, and Clary and Sullivan simply don't know how to make double plays.

Dutch Leonard is probably just as well off for having broken his leg in late April. With that Washington infield behind him, he was simply saving himself a lot of grief. Bob Feller, in his palmiest day, would have been hard put to show a winning record if he were pitching for the Nats this season. The Washington Club went 19 straight games a while back without hitting a single home run, for instance.

Yet, they've been doing pretty well on this Western trip, and it's a tribute to their enthusiasm, if nothing else. Twice within a week, young Clary raced home with the tying runs in the last inning because he had the sheer speed. Case and Spence have been shouldering a tremendous load without sign of faltering. The Nats have been winning ball games with their speed on the bases. They've been making the most of what talent they do have. Maybe we shouldn't be too harsh with them.

Apropos of nothing, did you hear the story they tell of Babe Herman, another of the innumerable stories they tell of the Babe when he was with the Dodgers in the days of their real daffiness?

Well, it seems that Herman had confided to Chuck Klein, of the Phils, that his young son was having trouble at school . . . "Why don't you get him an encyclopedia, Babe?" suggested Klein . . . "An encyclopedia?" growled Herman, "nothing doing. Let the little punk walk to school the way I used to."

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, July 30.—A long-time streak will be broken at Madison Square Garden tomorrow night, but it won't be Ray Robinson's string of 121 straight.

It will be Sammy Angott's streak. Without fail, he has always beaten, in subsequent fights, those who have beaten him. It has happened four times. This is his second fight against Robinson, who won the first one. But there's an end to everything, even Al Schacht's stories and the saga of Angott's revenge.

CONSIDINE

Tough query from "a couple of privates" at Camp Lee, Va.: name the 10 greatest pitchers in the major leagues within the past 20 years.

We'd say Walter Johnson, Grover Cleveland Alexander, Lefty Grove, Carl Hubbell, Dizzy Dean, Bob Feller, Red Ruffing, Ted Lyons, Dazzy Vance and Lefty Gomez.

Would you?

Not long before he made his now famous speech on sports before the graduating class of Dayton University, Jimmy Conzelman was asked by the university authorities to give them a list of his degrees. They wanted to be sure he was provided with the right kind of cap and gown.

Jimmy would like to have appeared in cap and gown, but he figured his conscience might bother him, inasmuch as he owns no degree, so he wrote back that he'd prefer to give his address in a business suit. It hurt him to write the letter.

Word of his disappointment leaked out. Last week the Agonis Club, of Toledo, invited him to speak at a luncheon and when he appeared they presented him with cap and gown. He crawled right into his shroud of erudition and spoke for an hour without using a one-syllable word.

Shortly after his Dayton University speech, wherein he called for an eradication of effeminate sports for the duration, Jimmy was invited to the annual banquet of the "C" club, of the University of Chicago, where drop-the-handkerchief is now the major sport. The principal speaker was that arch enemy of athletics, Dr. Robert M. Hutchins. When Jimmy was called on and arose and said, "it's a pleasure to be here with President Hutchins. We have two great things in common. We both are wearing gray suits and both live in Chicago."

Mike Jacobs will be temporarily alarmed to learn that Ray Robinson will not be able to appear to fight Sammy Angott tomorrow night at the Garden. Ray is now a sergeant with a coast artillery antiaircraft unit in Hawaii. However, that electrifying youth named Walker Smith, who took Ray's name when Ray gave up the ring, will show up, and a good time will be had by all.

Remember Wes Ferrell The former Indian, Red Sox, Senator, Yank, Dodger, Brave, etc., is wowing 'em with Lynchburg in the Virginia League. He's a hitter, now. Clippings from the Lynchburg News of last week inform me that he's hitting .377, is leading the league with 23 home runs and in runs batted in with 73. He says, ominously enough, "I'm not too old. I could be a help to a lot of big league teams."

Still young, Wes still holds a number of big league records. He leads all big league pitchers in the number of home runs hit in one season—nine. And he's the only pitcher ever to win 20 or more games in each of his first four seasons in the majors. He's also the only pitcher who ever tried to smash his brains against the concrete back-rest of the Boston dugout—after being taken out of a game—and the only pitcher who, after hooking a golf drive into the woods, ever took off his wrist watch and asked a friend to hold it while he tried to brain himself against a tee marker. In addition he's the only pitcher who ever tried to cure a sore army by astrology and, when that failed, by sic'ing a heard of ravenous bees on the ailing arm.

Which is a clue to why he is in Lynchburg.

3000 See Bout Ended In Seventh

Reiss Is Rushed To Hospital After Heavyweight Bout; To Be X-Rayed

By Tony Neri

In one of the most thrilling heavyweight scraps ever housed at Griffith Stadium—3000 fans on edge throughout—George Parke, hard-hitting North Carolina Negro, last night scored a seven-round TKO over Al Reiss, game Detroit heavyweight, in the scheduled 10-round main attraction promoted by Joe Turner.

The scrap was stopped at 57 seconds of the seventh stanza when Dr. John DeMayo, boxing commission physician, recommended to Referee Charley Reynolds that hostilities be halted because of a bad bruise over Reiss' left eye.

Reiss' manager fearing that the injury may be a concussion, rushed the fighter to Garfield Hospital where he spent the night and X-rays are to be taken this morning. Dr. DeMayo believed last night that a blood vessel had been broken.

Prior to the stopping of the fight Reiss had been smashed to the canvas six times and on each knockdown came back fighting harder than ever. His sheer gameness brought the crowd to its feet in appreciation for such a fine exhibition.

With Parks throwing 'em in with both hands, Reiss was forced to cover up time and again. But Reiss was game. After absorbing a terrific punishment in the first two heats, Reiss came back and nearly finished Parks as he connected with a one-two that staggered the Negro. A timely bell saved Parks from further damage in that third heat.

A Fast Start

Parks opened up in that first round as if he'd make short work of Reiss. He floored the Detroit heavyweight three times, twice for counts of eight and then for no count. Parks' punching power which had previously trampled 14 straight opponents, started early as he connected with potent left hooks to the jaw. Ringsiders wondered how Reiss managed to stay in the fight after taking that kind of a beating. But he stayed and even found time to give Parks a taste of body punching that the latter didn't relish.

Egged on by his manager, Harry Raskin, Reiss strove desperately to swing the fight his way. He gained the edge in the third and fourth, lost the fifth, and came back to box

First U. S. Victory Taken by Ended At Rockingham

By the Associated Press

Salem, N. H., July 30.—Mrs. F. Preece's Irish-bred colt, Ended, won the first race of his career in this country at Rockingham Park today when he led all the way to capture the Hudson Claiming Purse by ten lengths.

The race involved a four-horse field and was run over a track that was fetlock-deep in mud, and Ended covered the 6 furlongs in the sensational time of 1:13 2-5.

S. Apuzzo's Spread Eagle was second, Balmy Spring came third, 14 lengths off the flying Irishman, and the even money favorite, Carmenita, was last, another length back.

The winner paid $9 and $4.40, and Spread Eagle returned $5.40.

Bragan Stars As Phils Beat Cincinnati, 4-2

Philadelphia, July 30 (AP).—Shortstop Bobby Bragan, making his debut as a catcher, lined out a triple that drove in one run tonight to help the Phils to a 4-to-2 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

Another converted Phils player, Pitcher Earl Naylor, a former outfielder, started the game but Ike Pearson replaced him in the fourth after he tossed out two wild pitches. Pearson was credited with the win.

Eric Tipton, former Duke University star, hit Naylor for a home run in the second. The Reds' other run was tallied in the fourth by Max Marshall after one of Naylor's wild throws.

Nick Etten walked and scored for the Phils in the second when Tipton fell while going after Ron Northey's double. Pinky May singled in the same inning to score Northey. Another hit by May in the sixth scored Etten, who had singled.

In the same inning Bragan tripled to bring in Northey, who had reached first on Bucky Walters' bad throw of his grounder.

Dodgers Beat Cubs, 9-2, in Big Inning

Brooklyn Pounds Vern Olsen in Fifth; Allen Wins 10th Game Although Relieved by Macon

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, July 30.—Blasting across six runs on seven hits in the fifth inning, the Brooklyn Dodgers crushed the Chicago Cubs, 9 to 2, tonight and increased their National League lead to 8½ games over the idle St. Louis Cardinals.

Until the big blowoff, the Dodgers' only hit of Lefty Vern Olsen had been a single in the fourth inning, while the Cubs had taken a two-run lead with one run on a single by Olsen in the fourth and Lou Novikoff's sixth homer in the fifth.

But there was no questioning the authority of the champs when they came to bat in their half of the fifth.

Arky Vaughan and Mickey Owen singled and Frenchy Bordagaray lined a pinch double into left to score both and tie the game.

Pee Wee Reese sacrificed and Billy Herman bounced a single off Olsen's bare hand for another run. Then Pete Reiser and Joe Medwick also singled, Herman scoring, and Olsen gave way to Lon Warneke. Each of the Dodgers had hit the first pitch.

Warnke made the Dodgers look his wares over, but didn't stop their scoring. Dolph Camilli singled for a run and Medwick scored from third when Catcher Clyde McCullough, after taking Dixie Walker's pop foul, threw to second in a vain effort to keep Camilli from running.

The Dodgers got two more runs on three hits, one a triple by Reese in the sixth and a final tally on Reiser's double in the eighth.

The rally in the fifth gave credit to Johnny Allen for his tenth victory, although he gave the Cubs all their runs and was removed for a pinch hitter. Rookie Max Macon pitched three-hit shutout ball for the last four frames.

Grid Dodgers Vs. Army Team In Baltimore

By the Associated Press

The War Department said yesterday that the September 16 night football game between the Eastern All-Army team and the Brooklyn Dodgers of the National Professional League had been transferred from Jersey City to the Baltimore Municipal Stadium.

The transfer was made because of a possible conflict in dates with playoff games of the International Baseball League. Arrangements were completed today between the Baltimore Park Commissioners and War Department officials.

Proceeds will go to Army Emergency Relief. Brig. Gen. Frank A. Hancock, director of the Baltimore Stadium, announced his organization would enlist the support of civic and other organizations to fill the stadium.

Newsom's 8-Hitter Big Factor

Vernon Gets Homer As Griffs Pound Browns Hurling for Total of 13 Hits

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

St. Louis, July 30.—Those St. Louis Browns you have been hearing about since they barged into the first division and began eyeing second place are nicely cooled off now. The Nats just mopped 'em up in a three-game series. They slapped down the Browns this afternoon, 11 to 6.

The unpredictable Washington athletes are still acting like a gang hopped up by a base-hit serum. For the third consecutive day their hit production reached double figures. Today they splattered 13 blows around the premises and presented Buck Newsom with one of his rare pitching triumphs.

By far the nicest blow of the afternoon was Mickey Vernon's two-run homer in the third inning. Vernon deposited one of Freddy Ostermueller's pitches on top of the right-field roof with Bobby Estalella on base and two out to set the Nats up in a 4-1 lead.

Newsom Excused

Big Newsom, perspiring from every pore in the torrid temperature of St. Louis didn't quite last the afternoon out. With the Nats leading at the end of eight innings, 9-6, Manager Bucky Harris humanely excused the laboring Newsom and Walter Masterson took care of the Browns in the ninth.

The Browns tried to beat the Nats with Freddy Ostermueller, whom they called in from Toledo last week, but it was no dice. The stocky left-hander who used to pitch for the Red Sox was nudged out of the box in the fifth inning by his own willingness and three Washington hits. George Caster pitched the Nats their last three runs.

Ostermueller revealed at the start that he hadn't changed much. He walked Spence and Cullenbine in the first inning, and Estalella and Evans got them home with singles to give the Nats a 2-0 lead. The Browns got a run back in the second inning when Newsom dropped a throw at first base, but Vernon upped the Nats' margin to 4-1 with his third-inning homer after Estalella got an infield single.

Big Fifth

It seemed that Newsom was home after the fifth when the Nats came up with four more runs. Spence singled, with one out and was out stealing second, but with two out, Ostermueller ran into all sorts of trouble. He walked Cullenbine, pitched a single to Estalella and then filled the bases by walking Vernon. Then he wild-pitched a

Harry Grabiner, vice president of the Sox, said the players would report either at the end of the Texas League season or for 1943 spring training.

Indians Nose Out Bosox, 4-3, Gain Virtual Tie for 2nd Place

Mel Harder Wins Ninth With Single

Williams Socks 22d Homer With One On; 4-Game Series Is Squared

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, July 30.—The Indians climbed back to a virtual tie with second-place Boston today by coming from behind to wallop the Red Sox, 4 to 3, finishing the four-game series with an even break.

Mel Harder, trying for his ninth victory in seventeen starts, won his own ball game in the seventh inning with a single good for two runs. Oscar Judd suffered his eighth defeat against seven wins. Cleveland and Boston trail New York by 13 games, but the Sox hold an edge of three percentage points.

Williams Homers

Ted Williams cataloged his twenty-second home run of the season with a blast over the right-field screen in the first inning, driving in Johnny Pesky, who had singled.

Cleveland made up half this two-run deficit in the third inning with a run compounded of Ray Mack's single, Williams' error and Cris Hockett's single.

The Tribe batted around in the seventh, Ken Keltner leading off with a single. He was forced at second when Buster Mills bunted. Roy Weatherly went in to run for Mills, and Les Fleming walked. Judd's wild pitch allowed both runners to advance, and Ray Mack was purposely passed to reach Jim Hegan, filling the bases. The Indian catcher drew a walk, forcing Weatherly across the plate and leaving the bases filled. Harder's single then scored Fleming and Mack.

Load Bases Again

Oris Hockett forced Harder at second and then stole that base himself, and when Manager Lou Boudreau was intentionally passed, the bases were loaded again, but Heath forced Boudreau for the third out.

Boston threatened in the ninth when Pinchhitter Lou Finnel singled to send home Bobby Doerr after two were out, but Judd lined to Harder to end the contest.

Ted Schroeder, Wood Advance In N. Y. Tennis

By the Associated Press

Southampton, N. Y., July 30.—Ted Schroeder of Glendale, Calif., and Sidney Wood of New York led the way through the fourth round of play in the Meadow Club's Invitation Round Robin Tennis Tournament today.

Scoring their fourth victories without a loss, the two remained the only undefeated players in the 12-man singles field.

Schroeder kept his record clean with a 6—2, 6—0 triumph over Alejo Russell, Argentine champion.

Charley Mattman of New York, who lost his first three matches, broke his losing streak by handing Ladislav Hecht, former Czech Davis Cup star, his first defeat of the tourney, 6—4, 6—3.

Hecht is tied with Francisco Segura of Ecuador each with three victories and one defeat. Segura, who lost to Talbert yesterday, came back today to whip Seymour Greenberg of Chicago, the national clay court champion, 4—6, 6—3, 6—3.

Frank Bowden of New York vanquished the former internationalist, Frank Shields, 8—6, 9—6, while Victor Seixas of Philadelphia turned back Harris Everett of Jacksonville, Fla., 6—3, 2—6, 8—6.

It was the first triumph in four starts for Seixas, leaving Shields and Everett as the only players without a victory. Each has lost four straight.

Vols' Trainer Joins Neyland Staff

Knoxville, Tenn., July 30 (AP).—The war struck another blow at the University of Tennessee's football forces today as Mickey O'Brien, Volunteer trainer since 1938, announced he would join Col. Robert R. Neyland's staff in charge of the Army All-Star football squad.

O'Brien, 34, who conditioned the Vols' Orange, Rose and Sugar Bowl teams, said he had obtained a leave of absence from the university.

Sam Angott's Backers Puzzle Odds Makers

Lightweight Champ Meets Unbeaten Robinson For Second Time Tonight in New York

By the Associated Press

New York, July 30.—There is something going on in the better known Forty-ninth Street betting shoppes today that is puzzling the pricemakers no end.

Now, puzzling a pricemaker is quite a trick. Any gentleman who makes a habit of fooling around with things like five-horse parleys doesn't puzzle easily. But the leading citizens of the industry are more than a little baffled right now over the betting support being shown for Sammy Angott in his fight with unbeaten Ray Robinson tomorrow night in Madison Square Garden.

It's not so much that the boys and girls are putting their bobs right on Sammy's swarthy nose. It's the reason they give for doing it—that they're betting on the little Washington, Pa., Italian simply because he's already been beaten once by Robinson.

It is plain to see that this just doesn't add up, especially to the bookies, who have made the skinny "Sugar Man" a 1-to-2 choice to repeat his previous win over the lightweight champ, this time in a non-title 10-rounder, which Promoter Mike Jacobs hopes will attract a crowd of 15,000.

121 Straight

Yet there's something to it, even though the Harlem Hammer carries into the ring (at 10 p. m., Eastern war time) the longest winning streak in modern fight history—121 in a row as an amateur and a professional. For, if there's one thing Sammy enjoys more than sitting down to dinner it's getting a second crack at a guy who's beaten him before. Only seven clouters have outpointed him in the last six years. Four of them didn't know when they were well off and tried it again. And Sammy reversed the procedure on each.

The last time they fought, Robinson nearly took Sammy's head off with a right hand haymaker in the second round, and then had to go all out to stand off Angott's closing push. As a matter of fact, Angott won three of the last four rounds.

Sammy's crowding, body-banging style of workmanship is just the system that's unpleasant, to say the least, for Robinson. Marty Servo showed that in giving Ray a rough evening a couple of months ago with the same sort of stuff. Sammy is somewhat more polished at it, so this corner tabs him to spring the new season's first upset, with a ten-round decision.

Ex-Chattanooga Pitcher Dies

Athens, Tenn., July 30 (AP).—Big Jim Baskett, 55, star pitcher on the Chattanooga South Atlantic League champions of 1909, died in a hospital here today after a long illness.

Baskett got his baseball start on the City League team sponsored by the Chattanooga News in 1907. Two years later he was signed by Chattanooga. He pitched the final and winning game that year in the first Dixie series, in which Chattanooga defeated Atlanta.

Sold to Cleveland, Baskett was farmed to Toledo for two years in 1912; he was recalled by Cleveland, where he played for two seasons. Later he was sold to Memphis in 1916, but an injured leg ended his baseball career.

Lardner Nears Fourth Wisconsin Golf Title

Milwaukee, July 30 (AP).—Lyn Lardner of Oconomowoc, three times Wisconsin Amateur Golf champion, moved into the semifinals of the 1942 tournament today, defeating Bob Hipke of Milwaukee, 4 and 2.

Lardner will meet John Hayes of Appleton, 4 to 2 quarter-finals winner over Tony Jaris of Milwaukee in a 36-hole match tomorrow. In the lower bracket, Bobby Dernhel and Wallie Glaub of Milwaukee will fight it out for the finalist berth.

Saratoga 'Cap Won Handily By Pomayya

By the Associated Press

Saratoga Race Track, N. Y., July 30.—Enhancing her status for the Diana Handicap, filly and mare special of a mile and a furlong to be decided August 25, Mrs. Dodge Sloane's Pomayya toyed with a half dozen other class C campaigners in the Red Leaf Handicap here this afternoon.

Heroine of Hialeah Park's Black Helen Handicap last winter, the Pompey four-year-old today completed her seven-furlong journey with six lengths' winning margin Mrs. David Buckley's Grand Party, the rank outsider, saved the place by a head. Full Cry, the favorite, made the race a monopoly for lady owners when he carried Mrs. W. O. Hicks' colors to third position.

While only seven races were carded today, the betting on the first five was higher than any other day of the current session. This despite the fact that the attendance came to only 4106. Last year's fourth day drew 5792 fans.

Pomayya, which also is named for the local Whitney and Saratoga Cup, paid $9.60 and covered the distance over a slow track in 1:25 1-5. The track has not been fast on any of the four days here to date. Today's card drew only 42 starters, an average of six to a race, but horsemen entered their charges in higher numbers for tomorrow, probably feeling a fast strip is due.

Conn McCreary, pacemaking pilot here, scored a double on Pomayya. He began the meeting with four victories Monday and has yet to be shut out.

Can't Wait, 7-year-old veteran of many a stakes battle, had to carry 123 pounds in the Red Leaf. Bothered leaving the gate, he failed to become a threat, finishing fourth. Full Cry and Grand Party vied for early command. Pomayya ran past them on the bend and widened out in the stretch as if much the best under 109 pounds.

Athletics Beat Tigers, 7 to 6; Lose 1st, 11-5

By the Associated Press

Detroit, July 30.—The Detroit Tigers staged a six-run eighth inning rally to defeat the Philadelphia Athletics, 11 to 5, in the opener of a double-header today, but the Macks took the nightcap, 7 to 6, on tight relief pitching by Roger Wolff. Detroit clinched the series, however, two games to one, its first in a month.

Pinky Higgins, returning to the lineup after a day on the bench, drove home six Detroit runs in the opener, climaxing the big eighth with a four-run homer off Luman Harris, who was charged with his ninth setback against ten victories. It was Higgins' ninth of the year. Barney McCosky's two-run single drove in the winning runs and gave Paul (Dizzy) Trout his seventh victory opposite 13 defeats.

In the nightcap the A's spotted Phil Marchildon, their leading pitcher, a four-run lead but he suddenly lost his stuff in the fourth as Detroit clustered five runs on five hits including Birdie Tebbetts' first homer of the season with one on.

Dick Siebert's homer, his second of the year, squared the count in the sixth, and he and Pete Suder each banged home a run in the ninth off John Gorsica, who suffered his second defeat against three victories. Elmer Valo also had hit his second round tripper in the first. The victory was Wolff's tenth against nine losses.

The Figure Filberts Figure Dodgers Are at Home Again

The Cards Have Too Much Ground to Make Up to Beat the Flock, Records Plainly Show

By the Associated Press

New York, July 30.—The society of "figger filberts" held its first meeting of the season in its padded cell club rooms today and decided that, barring a catastrophe like the loss of Leo Durocher's voice, the Brooklyn Dodgers are pretty close to a cinch to hang onto their National League pennant.

Since they disposed of the second-place St. Louis Cardinals two out of three in their just-concluded set, the Gowanus Bums are now sitting in a spot where, if they play only .500 ball the rest of the way home, the Cards would have to win 38 of their remaining 58 games to beat them out. This is a .655 percentage, and since the Cardinals have turned in only a .625 mark so far this season, you can plainly see it looks like a bad case of St. Louis blues.

What's more, of the 56 games the Brooklyns still have to play, 21 of them are with the bewildered Bees and futile Phillies. And since the Flatbush follies already have knocked off these two clubs 19 times against four losses, you don't need a crystal ball to see that the doctor couldn't have prescribed a better treatment for the Bums. At the same time, the Cards still have 23 to go with Pittsburgh and Cincinnati, a pair of clubs that have whipped St. Louis 10 times this year while losing only 11 to the Cards.

The way things stand now, Brooklyn has a record of 70 wins and 29 losses. St. Louis, eight games back, has 60 and 36. Thus if the Dodgers win only half their remaining games—28—they'll wind up with 97 victories for the season. The Cards then would have to win 38 to top them.

However, since the Dodgers have shown no indication of coming apart at the seams and dropping to a .500 playing average, the chances are they'll probably wind up this year with a better mark than last season, when they won an even 100 games. This profound thought brought the meeting of the Filberts to a close, and they all went back quietly with their keepers.

Grays Meet Barons Twice on Sunday

The Washington Homestead Grays are ready for Birmingham's Black Barons in a 2 o'clock double-header Sunday in Griffith Stadium.

The games are being sponsored by Columbia Lodge, No. 85, and Morning Star Lodge, No. 40, as a special feature of the third annual local Negro Elks' Athletic Day.

The Grays, fresh from a double-header 2-1 and 2-0 setback of Baltimore's Negro National League-leading Elites, are facing the Black Barons, an intersectional opponent which has ranked with the South's finest Negro teams for the past 25 years.

Two Upsets Mark Western Tennis

Kalamazoo, Mich., July 30 (AP).—Top-seeded Bobby Falkenburg and Art MacDonald of Los Angeles swept into the semifinals of the Western junior tennis championships here today along with two youths who scored upset victories. Ted Norpoth of Houston, Tex., upset conqueror yesterday of Benny Migrow, pushed third-seeded Frank Willett of Anniston, Ala., out of the running with a hard-fought 6—3, 3—6, 6—3 victory. Fred Kovaleski of Hamtramck, Mich., eliminated Tom Falkenburg of Hollywood, Calif., 6—2, 10—12, 6—4, rallying to win the deciding set after twice blowing away match points in the second set.

"Slingshop" Sullivan held FBI to three hits last night as Surf Club kept pace with Standard Linen in handing the G-Men a 5-to-1 shellacking. Jack Walsh's hitting featured.

Favored Seaway Puts On Drive to Take Bel Air Feature

Royal Echo Hangs On For Second

Samaha's Recently Acquired Dasher Scores by a Length; Double Pays $18.60

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Bel Air, Md., July 30.—Seaway, owned by Eddie Samaha and trained by George A. Cook, a pair of Washingtonians, won by a length under a hard drive in the Churchville Purse, featuring the Thursday program here. Claimed out of her previous race, Seaway stepped up with the best sprinters available hereabouts and carried the light weight of the party to victory.

The daughter of Man o' War and Silway finished in front of W. M. Beougher's Royal Echo. Three lengths farther back came Capt. Ewart Johnston's Royal Business to be third. Two scratches reduced the field to five starters.

Many of the regulars knew that Seaway had been troubled in the early stages of her previous outing and they piled the money through the windows, installing her the favorite. She rewarded the faithful with a $5.30 pay-off while going the 6½ furlongs in 1:23 over a track that was somewhere between slow and good.

Boston Blue, Royal Echo and Discretion battled it out for the early lead while Jockey Buddy Root rated Seaway along in fourth position. At the far turn, Boston Blue weakened and Royal Echo shot to the front. Discretion then tired and dropped back. Seaway, roused by Root, went to the extreme outside and collared Royal Echo to take command. In the final drive, Seaway's light weight told and she kept going under strong handling. Royal Business, outrun early, rallied but too late to get anything except the show award.

Favorites figured in both ends of the $18.60 pay-off in the daily double. O. L. Bonifay's Little Hoops graduated from the maiden ranks in the first race, winning by five lengths under Johnny Harrell's handling. In the second event, Mrs. C. Dabson's Merry Mistake, purchased by the owner this morning, was up to take a head victory over Gratis, owned by J. Fred Adams, jr. Little Hoops paid $5.30 and Merry Mistake returned $5.90.

WAKE was kept on outside from beginning, went to top approaching stretch, was kept to hard drive and held on gamely. MR. JIMMIE was forward factor throughout, responded to hard riding and closed willingly. SILVER BEAM improved position on inside, but weakened in slow going along rail. CHANNING was hard ridden while close up and weakened in closing test.

Selections at Bel Air

Dear Al:

Don't forget that today is Army and Navy relief day at this track. All money above actual expenses will go to these worthy charities. All the races have been named and there's plenty of hunches. For instance, there's Seventeen Guns in the first race—the Army Emergency Relief Purse. In the second race there's Beans and the event is named the Navy Relief Society Purse. Jockey Al Bocson, who has been on the sick list, has packed his tack and left for Cumberland to rest up until racing begins there on Tuesday. Jockey Johnny Harrell had a one-winner lead over Jockey Willie Balzaretti going into yesterday's program. The score was 9 to 8. Jockey A. F. Martinez, on the suspended list, leaves today for his native Cuba. "I'm feeda up on racing," says the dark-skinned fellow. "I sell my tack. No ride no more. I just want peace." He rode for 11 years and at one time was a star performer for the Denemark Stable. He was almost killed in a fall and never regained his saddle skill again. Walter Haight is on the also eligible list today. He is asked to go a mile with 117 pounds. He is a little fellow and may have too much weight. However, he is a fit, hard-knocking colt so don't be surprised if he takes it all. The best claim of the meeting appears to have been Bronx II. A promising 3-year-old. Hadawin is the best 2-year-old shown around the smaller tracks this year and that goes for Four Leaf, the Charles Town champion, too. No jumping race here yesterday and I didn't miss it. As far as I'm concerned you can leave that steeplechasing to the rails and woods, the farther back in the woods the better. They prove nothing and every rider looks like he is pulling his horse. Match Point, in yesterday's fourth race, won 12 races last year at an assortment of tracks. Good show, good cause today. See you on the ail.

Bill.

First race—BEAR CAT looks like the right one in the day's 2-year-old dash. Needs only the right handling. LADY TENNIE will be along in time to be a threat. OHBGOOD and SEVENTEEN GUNS are good ones on the reserve list.

Second race—EYEOPENER has speed and appears best in this field of maidens. BEANS has had many chances. However, that last was promising. DUPLIKET for the minor award.

Third race—The Bosley entry of FLEMAR and SAMUEL D. is formidable and should account for the chief money in a steeplechase of this kind. REAL MONEY and CANMAS may take places in the money circle.

Fourth race—BRAZEN HUSSY gets my call in this rather open affair. Seems the best at the weights. BILL BLEIWEISS has speed and will have to be caught. SADDLING BELL is consistent and belongs in the first flight.

Fifth race—LADY LONGWORTH, at the weights, could be the right one in this mile test. TERRY MAY has speed and will be out there winging part of the way. CUTH won here early in the meeting. I have my doubts about WALTER HAIGHT carrying 117 pounds a mile. However, he will be in there knocking.

Sixth race—ANYWAY, tossed in this with 103 pounds, could be the right one at a good price. I'm going to string along. BLUE TWINK has speed and will be right there if taken off the reserve list. HIBLAZE for the show end.

Seventh race—GOV. SHOLTZ can whip this kind and needs only the right handling. WALTER LIGHT and GENDARME for the place and show awards.

Eighth race—GROUCHER'S BOY is the class of the day's finale. Needs only to get off the reserve list. CRIMSON LANCER was bothered last out and is better than that effort. IDLE NIGHT is a possibility.

Best bet—GOV. SHOLTZ.

Headstart Wins $5000 Stake

Chicago, July 30 (AP).—Headstart, a home-bred filly running for Charles T. Fisher's Diziana Stables, soundly trounced a bunch of colts in the $5000 added Hyde Park Stakes for juveniles at Arlington Park today.

Taking the lead early from Eddie Anderson's Burnt Cork, Headstart hung on nicely in the stretch to beat Gustave Ring's Ringmenow by a length and a half. Another length back in third was A. C. Ernst's Alquest.

Charles Nuckols' Littletown, even money favorite, finished sixth in the eight horse field.

Tavern Edges Center Market in Post Sandlot League, 2-1

Braddock Drives Home Winning Run

Kimmel Pitches 4-Hitter to Push Marketmen Deeper Into Second Place

Johnny Braddock, shortstop of the Little Tavern nine, singled cleanly in the seventh inning to drive Harry Bassin, who had doubled, across the plate and give his team a 2-1 upset victory over Center Market yesterday in the Washington Post-Industrial League.

The clash, on the Ellipse, was one of the best in the city's strongest sandlot league this season. As a result the Marketmen, winners of the first half and threatening for the second-half title, dropped farther into second place behind the Heurich Brewers.

Al Kimmel went the distance for the winners, allowing four hits. Hoff issued one more on the mound for Center Market.

Today the losers try a comeback when they face Cameo Furniture in a 5:30 game on the South Ellipse.

run home. Evans was purposely passed filling the bases, and Sullivan got two more runs home with a single to center. Caster got the pitching job, and Clary greeted him with a single to center that moved the fourth run of the inning home.

All that commotion upped the Nats' lead to 8-3, but in the sixth, Newsom saw three runs of his margin vanish. With one out, he pitched a single to Criscola, a double to Chartak and was belted for a home run by Pinch Hitter Walt Judnich, who batted for Manager Sewell.

Thereafter, however, Newsom settled down and didn't let anybody else get on base throughout the eighth. Case doubled to left and Cullenbine singled to right for a run in the eighth, and in the ninth the Nats got two more after Vernon and Evans led off with hits. Caster eventually walked Pinch Hitter Bruce Campbell with the bases full, and a second run scored on Case's infield out.

Newsom and Masterson did an eight-hit job on the Browns. . . . Chet Laabs, the league's new batting menace, was cooled off by the Washington pitching. . . . In the three games he was held to two hits, both infield singles. . . . The Nats have been winning despite the fact their infield hasn't made a double play in four games. . . . Tonight the Nats moved on to Chicago where Sid Hudson open up against the White Sox tomorrow. . . . Manager Bucky Harris doesn't like the way his infield is working; in fact he's quite disgusted with it, but as he was saying after the game today, "you can't break up a winning combination."

Park even in the sixth. But in the seventh, with both exchanging in midring, Dr. DeMayo stepped in and Referee Reynolds was forced to call it.

Lewis Scores

The preliminary card opened with Stoney Lewis, 161, of Washington, knocking out Buddy Fisher, 158, of Baltimore, in 1:12 of the second stanza of a scheduled four-round bout.

In the second four-rounder Morrow Van Cleve, 125, of Washington, decisioned Jimmy Jerrico, 125, also of Washington.

The next bout, another four-rounder, went to Eddy Kane, 143, over Billy Washington, 147, by a decision. Kane came on to win after taking a beating in the first round. Both are Washington welterweights.

Charlie Petro, 143, former local amateur champ, scored a technical knockout over George Farrell, 138, of Wilmington, in 1:18 of the last heat of a four-rounder.

Danny Petro, 123, of Washington, knocked out Ed Williamson, 123 of Baltimore in 2:57 of the first round of a four-heat affair. Petro outclassed his foe from the opening bell.

Charlie Aleski, 160 of the Aberdeen Proving Grounds, gained a six-round decision over Jimmy Hill, 156 of Washington.

Redskins Sign Carroll, 2 Others

Moore and Cifers Make Total of 17 Ready for Season

Vic Carroll, who in six years with the Washington Redskins has earned the reputation of the most valuable lineman on the squad, was one of three to return signed contracts yesterday just 10 days in advance of the opening practice sessions at San Diego, Calif.

Carroll, who played guard at Nevada University in his college career, has played guard, tackle, center and end for Coach Ray Flaherty. The 27-year-old, 6-foot 3 lineman is exceptionally fast for his 226 pounds and fits in at any line position.

Wilbur Moore, who was out part of last season with injuries, and Ed Cifers, one of the rookie stars of the league last year, also signed up, making a total of 17 already registered with General Manager Jack Espey.

Moore, whose trait of running to the left better than the right is unusual among halfbacks, is a valuable man in reverse plays and weak side bucks into the line. He has been one of the finest blockers on the squad in his three years in pro ball after starring for three years at the University of Minnesota.

Cifers came to the Redskins last year from Tennessee after playing with the Vols in three bowl games in as many years.

The few Redskin players who make their homes in Washington during the off-season, including Carroll, Bob McChesney, Bill Young and others, will leave here next Thursday afternoon with club officials and other squad members will be picked en route.

VIC CARROLL

Practice will start Monday, August 10 at San Diego, where the 'Skins trained last year. Flaherty plans the usual two drills a day for the first few weeks as the Redskins face their toughest exhibition game schedule in years before the regular season opens here September 13.

Redskins Start Practice on Coast On August 10

Detroit Lions Have 35 Players Under Contract

Detroit, July 30 (AP).—The Detroit Lions of the National Football League boosted to 35 the number of players under contract with the signing today of Mike Balitsaris, Tennessee, and Woodrow Fulton, Mississippi College, ends; Matize Perantoni, Youngstown College, and Sumner Farison, Ohio State, halfbacks; and Albert Gutknecht, Niagara University, tackle. All will report for training August 5 at Charlevoix, Mich.

Victory 'Cap At Arlington Attractive

Chicago, July 30 (AP).—The $7500 Victory Handicap, a new fixture on Arlington's closing day race program Saturday, appears to be luring away some of the field that might have started against mighty Whirlaway in the $25,000 added Arlington Handicap the same day.

Definitely pointing for the Victory Handicap are Valdina Orphan and Kings Abbey, both of which were eligible for the big handicap.

Alsab, the bargain colt, is eligible for both races, but there were indications today he would skip them both and delay his return to the track until the Washington Park meeting opens next week.

This will leave Whirlaway with such possible opponents as Valdina Farm's Rounders, which ran second to turfdom's leading money winner in the Massachusetts Handicap, Darby Dan Farm's best seller and Louis B. Mayer's Australian-bred Reading II. Rounders will carry 103 pounds; Reading II, 118 and Best Seller, 120, to Whirlaway's 130.

Other possible starters include J. E. Widener's Moscow II, David Strauss' Daily Troubl, Hugh Nesbitt's Staretor and Dixiana's Sirocco.

Rosecrance Wins In Chicago Golf

Chicago, July 30 (AP).—Bob Rosecrance of Rockford, Ill., won his third straight Chicago District Golf Association Junior Open Title today by defeating George Jemsek of the St. Andrews Club, 1 up, in their 18-hole championship match.

Rosecrance, 19-year-old Stanford University student, reached the finals earlier today with a 5 and 3 decision over Fred Fassnacht of Paw Paw, Mich.

Out Fishing . . . . . With Jack Bell

Last weekend anglers both fresh and salt water found the weather man against them. What promised to be an ideal weekend became a dull one, many fishermen cancelling their trips because of the rain.

JACK BELL

Among local salt water fishermen an idea that seems to be prevalent is that all one has to do to charter a boat is to call some boat captain, the day before making his fishing trip, and everything will be all set. This is not so. Many anglers who have called us as early as Wednesday of last week, to get a captain's phone number, found that it was just about impossible to charter a boat. After considerable expense making several long distance telephone calls some were disappointed. Better make your arrangements early and don't cancel at the last minute after you do charter a boat.

Every day more evidence shows up that makes us believe this is one of the best fishing years on the Chesapeake Bay for a l-o-n-g time. Stripers are being taken almost everywhere and of a fair average in size. The fact that fishermen are also catching hardheads and some weakfish along with stripers makes it all the more interesting.

If the newcomer hasn't tried bay fishing, he should get in on one of the fishing parties that are being organized almost every day. Or better still organize one of his own, get seven friends together and a trip to one of the nearby fishing points should not cost more than $3 apiece.

There is nothing to fishing in the bay, you don't have to know a dog-gone thing about fishin'. No dark mystery about salt-water fishing. Each fishing boat is manned by an experienced and capable captain who will cheerfully instruct the newcomer. As a matter of fact, he will rig up your line, bait your hook, unhook your fish and give you a hand when you get things all in a tangle. Their charges are moderate, and when divided among several people this fishing is inexpensive.

Take the family along, the trip offers a novel and thrilling short vacation, it's a lot of fun even if you don't catch a lot of fish.

"Pete" Chambliss, Fishing Editor for the Baltimore Sun, writes about an interesting and inexpensive method of catching stripers. "In a note to Frank L. Bentz, chief clerk of Maryland's game commission, Gordon Fleet, member of the State Game and Inland Fish Commission, describes an interesting and perhaps satisfying method of landing striped bass with a fly rod.

"Last Thursday afternoon we injoyed some unusual sport. We landed 28 nice rock from 1½ to 2 pounds, on fly rods using a white streamer fly and spinner. This brings to mind that many enthusiastic fly fishermen are passing up somthing extra fine in fly-fishing which is both cheap and of easy access to many.

"We go out in a rowboat to one of the numerous reefs along the bay shore and, using a few native shrimp to bring the rock near the boat, we cast our fly and—zip a nice fish is on and we have quite a fight if he goes 2 pounds or over.

"The water on these reefs is seldom over 4 feet deep, so that a fish must come up and do practically all of his fighting on the surface."

Nothing impressive in the way of black bass fishing this week. The Potomac River after last weekend rain storms is reported muddy farther up than most of us care to drive. Once the river gets just right, we look for some fine catches. The few anglers who've managed to be on the water early last week, when it was clear, report good catches. So far the best reports have been of fish caught off Swain's and at Seneca.

Shenandoah River bass anglers have fared better than the Potomac angler. The Shenandoah, strange as it may seem, has been clear almost every day since the season opened.

After making a long trip up river, if you should find the water muddy don't let it deter you from getting some sport. Get some kind of bait, most anything like shrimp, worms, fresh-water mussels or minnows, and bait up and give the catfish a whirl. You'll be surprised at the sport a channel cat will give you, especially on light fly or bait casting tackle. And don't let anyone tell you they are not good eating, we know of a number of bass fishermen who've learned to like 'em better than black bass.

Here are some of the places on the bay they're getting them.

The Gooses—Off Kenwood Beach or Breezy Point, plenty of hardheads and some weak fish.

Herring Bay—Schools of stripers breaking almost every day, caught trolling either off large charter boats or rowboats. Rowboat anglers trolling off Holland Point making best catches. Good spot to try shrimp chumming and the fly rod.

Solomons — Hardheads biting galore. Plenty of rock either trolling, chumming or floating soft crabs. Some speckled trout.

St. Georges Island—St. Mary's River, good striper fishing with some hardheads.

Ocean City—Anglers are now getting some of the best surf-fishing in years. Best in and around the inlet. Trout up to 15 pounds, rock fish, 2 to 9 pounds, and plenty of small kingfish. After August 1 offshore fishing at Ocean City will be restricted to within one mile.

Eastern Shore—From Eastern Bay to Tangier sound the waters are literally alive with fish.

Bill Jeffries Rolls Record 198 Pin Game

Bill Jeffries, rolling the biggest single of his bowling career as well as an alley record won the Clarendon Handicap and $25 last night after marking up a 198 score for his third and last game. Starting with a 9 box, a triple-header strike and other strikes and spares followed in rapid succession. His box counts were: 9-28-59-88-108-125-144-163-183-198. He needed 7 in the tenth for a 200 game but failed when his free roll netted him but 5 pins. He totaled 472 to win. Other winners were Boo Henson, 467—$15; Norman Warner, 437—$9; Wilbur Funk, 428—$6; Sonny Blaskin, 426—$5; Pete Peters and J. H. Broyhill, 425 for $2 each and Al Wright got $4 for top single of 156. Sixty-eight entered the event.

BETHESDA

A mixed doubles match is carded for 8 o'clock tonight at Bethesda Bowling Center when Alma Mehler and Bill King roll against Lillian Copeland and Lindsay Stott. Mrs. Copeland, a star of the Ladies' District League, is one of Washington's better known woman bowlers, and Stott, a Men's District League ace, bowled last season for King Pin. Monday Stott starts with Uncle Sam in the Coast Guard League.

BROOKLAND

Cones' 152-400 topped the "A" division of the Brookland Men's Doubles League and with his partner, Jenkins, the duo posted a 260 game and 732 set. Lowery's 139-358 led the "B" men with McKean and Lowery getting 257-693 to top the others. LaBille and Gautier won the championship of the "A" boys, while the duo of Townsend-Pender led in "B."

Secretary Dave Mulquin of the Brookland Merchants League has called a special meeting at 8 o'clock Tuesday, August 4, to talk over organization plans for the coming season. The gathering will be at the Brookland alleys and team captains or those wishing to sponsor a team in this fast loop are requested to attend.

CLARENDON

Esther Ewald and Nell Hummer topped the Clarendon mixed doubles with respective counts of 301 and 117 while a 142 single and 343 set by Henry McGee led the men. McGee and Helen Roberts had highs of 238-638 to win a pair from opponents.

Naiman Photo diamonders dropped out of a tie for first place in the Departmental League yesterday when they suffered a 9-3 defeat by New York Lunch. Today the losers have a chance to recover in a tangle with the leading Union Printers on the East Ellipse at 5:30.

Lefty McIntyre chalked up his fourth triumph for the Lunchmen despite allowing 11 hits. He struck out 6 and allowed no walks. Meanwhile Johnny Cathloth, centerfielder, sparked a 10-hit attack with a single, double and triple in six times up.

Jim Thomson, Heafner Post Subpar 68s

By the Associated Press

St. Paul, July 30.—Two of golf's greatest distance hitters, Clayton Haefner of Linville, N. C., and Jimmy Thomson of Del Monte, Calif., today completed final tuneups for the $5000 St. Paul Open with par-wrecking 68's.

As the two heavy-shouldered pros were hailed as favorites to capture $1000 first prize money in the tournament, which starts tomorrow, Leland Gibson of Kansas City, Mo., became the field's darkhorse.

Gibson also posted a 68, coupling 34's on his two nine hole trips.

32 on Back Nine

Heafner was out in even par 36, but roared back in 32 with four one-putt greens. His last nine tally was the low of the day as the boys paired with women golfers in the tournament's annual preliminary. Heafner and Phyllis Otto of Atlantic, Iowa, runner-up in the recent Western Women's Open in Chicago, won the mixed foursome matches. Miss Otto posted a 77, by far the lowest woman's card of the day.

Siege Gun Thomson, regarded the longest driver in the game, had 33, 35. Other low rounds included 69s by Johnny Revolta and Jim Foulis of Chicago, Chick Harbert of Battle Creek, Mich., and Joe Coria of St. Paul, and 70s by Jim Ferrier of Chicago and Ralph Guldahl of Rancho Santa Fe, Calif.

Dick Metz of Chicago, 1939 tourney winner, had 71 while the defending champion, Horton Smith of Springfield, Mo., and three-time winner, Harry Cooper of Minneapolis, carded 73's. Ben Hogan, leading money winner, also posted 73.

150 Entered

A field of some 150 players begin teeing off at 9 a. m. (C. W. T.) tomorrow in the first lap of the 72-hole event. Haefner goes out at 10 a. m., with Johnny Revolta, Chicago, and Les Kennedy, Cambridge, Mass. Other top foursomes include Richard Arlen, Beverly Hills, Calif., Little and Hogan 11:35, and Thomson, Coria and Dick Metz of Chicago at 1:30 p. m.

The low scorer at the end of 36 holes Saturday will be given a $25 war bond in a plan suggested by Fred Corcoran, P. G. A., tournament manager, honoring Corpl. Ed Oliver of the Army. The low scorer in Sunday's final 36-hole round also will get a bond for "Seaman Sam Snead Day." Snead and Oliver, both former St. Paul Open champions whose duties prevented their competition this year, will be sent similar $25 bonds.

Discounting rumors that tournament golf is reaching the end of the line for the duration of the war, Corcoran said that no cancellations have been made on this winter's tour.

Betty Bemis on Hand

Neenah, Wis., July 30 (AP).—Betty Bemis, of Indianapolis, who last year clipped 5.9 seconds from the existing meet record in the 400-meter free style event of the Women's National A. A. U. swimming and diving championships, will defend her title in the 1942 competition here August 14-16, officials said today.

..one for the book!

1—From bud . . . IMPERIAL started as a tiny bud in a big garden full of well-known brands—but it had what a whiskey needs to go places! A full, rich aroma—a smoothness that widens your eyes—and a flavor that makes you say "Ah!"

2—To blossom . . . And how demand shot up when IMPERIAL blossomed out! Good? IMPERIAL was good enough to take the lead over 332 other brands in one big test state. Figures coming in from other states look like more big wins!

3—To full bloom! It takes more than a good whiskey to be such a towering success—it takes a great whiskey! Let one sip tell you why IMPERIAL is the fastest-growing whiskey in all America!

Great—for two big reasons!

1. Imperial is "velveted" for extra smoothness. Like IMPERIAL's rare base whiskies, its choice spirits are made in the world's largest distillery—then "velveted" by a method similar to the softening of spirits used in making fine Scotch.

2. Imperial is "flavor-peaked" for extra richness. This superb American blend has that expensive, "imported-whiskey" flavor because its foundation whiskies are specially distilled to give them individual qualities—then blended together to a delicate "flavor peak."

Taste why it's America's fastest-growing whiskey!

Bethlehem Net Climbs Despite Spurt in Taxes

By the Associated Press

New York, July 30.—Bethlehem Steel Corp. today reported a profit for the June quarter of $6,070,913, equal to $1.49 a share on the common stock and announced a dividend of $1.50 on the common, continuing the rate paid in recent quarters.

Despite a substantial provision for increased taxes the quarter's earnings topped those of the same period last year and were only slightly under those for the March quarter of this year.

For the first three months of 1942 Bethlehem earned $6,140,688 or $1.51 a share and in the second three months of last year the profit was $5,651,457 or $1.34 a share.

Operations Show Drop

In a press conference after the board meeting, Eugene G. Grace, Bethlehem president, referred to a slight drop in the company's operations and said it was chiefly due to an insufficient supply of scrap metal.

He expressed gratification over the progress of Bethlehem's shipbuilding program which he termed "enormous," and said it was ahead of schedule in every category, although subject to future limitations because of material shortages.

"We're pretty proud of our shipbuilding," he commented.

Bethlehem's current steel operating rate of 97 per cent compared with a second quarter average of 98.9 per cent, 98 per cent in the first three months and 102.6 per cent in the second quarter of last year. Grace said all was going into war production.

Furnace repairs and the raw material situation in general, Grace said, were factors in the lower operations, but he considered the scrap situation the most serious handicap.

The company's provision of $25,210,000 for taxes based on income for the second quarter included five million dollars in anticipation of a substantial increase in Federal taxes for the year 1942.

6 Months Net Off

The company's indicated net profit for the six months to June 30 was $12,211,601, equal to $3 a share on the common against $16,087,485 or $4.29 a share in the same period last year. Total income for the June quarter was $41,565,898 against $33,346,952 in the 1941 period and for the six months it was $82,301,289 against $59,905,080 in the same period of 1941.

Bethlehem's net billings for the second quarter totaled $360,118,243 against $305,653,318 in the first quarter and $218,555,719 in the 1941 second quarter.

The wage increase recently awarded to "Little Steel" workers, Grace said, would be put into effect in all Bethlehem's manufacturing and fabricating plants retroactive to last February 6. The estimated cost for the period to June 30 was $5,600,000, all of which was provided out of income for the second quarter.

Grace also disclosed that salaried employes of Bethlehem receiving up to $5000 a year had been given a percentage increase equal to that awarded steel workers, also retroactive to February 6.

Republic Steel Net Drops to $3,355,158

Cleveland, July 30 (AP).—Republic Steel Corp., the Nation's third largest producer, today reported second quarter net profit of $3,355,158 against $5,428,748 the same three months of 1941.

The company provided $17,800,000 for taxes, based on present law "plus a contingency provision for possible future changes in the tax law," and noted that "Federal income and excess profits tax provisions of $35,800,000 for the first six months of 1942 are nearly double the provision of 18 million dollars for the like period in 1941."

Net profit for the first six months this year was $8,072,120, against $13,618,714.

Youngstown Sheet Net Off Slightly

Youngstown, Ohio, July 30 (AP).—Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. earned a net profit of $2,291,119 in the quarter ended June 30, slightly below the first quarter net of $2,576,597.

Increased taxes again acted to reduce the net profit as in the first quarter period. In the second quarter, profit from operations, after deduction of maintenance and repair charges and provision for payment of additional wages by virtue of the War Labor Board's recent order, totaled $14,099,277.

Depreciation and interest on funded debt reduced the profit by $33,131,158 while Federal taxes were $8,677,000.

War Damage Insurance Estimated at 100 Billion

New York, July 30 (AP).—Bombardment insurance placed with the Federal War Damage Corp., so far amounts to at least 100 billion dollars and final figures may run as much as one-third higher, it was reported in insurance circles today.

Figures would have been substantially higher, it was said, if all the binders for bombardment insurance which the War Damage Corp. permitted to be placed during the first half of July had been followed up by policies. Around one-fifth of the original binders lapsed, it was estimated.

Tobacco Block Awarded

New York, July 30 (AP).—Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Beane were successful bidders yesterday for a block of 46,000 shares of American Tobacco "B" stock offered for a trust account by a New York City bank. The price was not announced.

Survey for Treasury Shows 80% of Public Is Sincere in Pledges to Buy War Bonds

New York, July 30.—Uncle Sam has just tapped some of this war's forgotten heroes—men, women and children—to see if they meant it when they said they'd help him. He found today that they did.

The answer was disclosed in a survey—conduced at the request of Treasury Secretary Morgenthau among New Yorkers who signed pledges to buy war bonds and stamps—which showed that 79.6 per cent of them were digging down in their dimes and pennies, making sacrfices, to help pay the cost of the war.

The pledges were signed in the last two weeks of June and Morgenthau, wishing a quick double check to see if they were being kept, had nine leading advertising agencies voluntarily make the survey in the middle weeks of July.

At the conclusion of the survey one of the agencies, which had sent out trained investigators to question 1000 families and individuals, said:

"In the dingy rooms of New York's old brownstone apartment houses we found some of this war's forgotten heroes. They are those people who, with barely enough money to buy food and shelter, nevertheless are sharing their meager incomes with the Government by buying war stamps."

No general conclusion about the persons who signed pledges elsewhere in this country was drawn from the survey, which was limited to New York, but there is no reason to believe that what was found true here would not be true in Chicago or any little whistle stop.

Two million persons signed the pledges in New York but the investigators did not go to those who had promised to do their bond or stamp purchasing through banks or the firms that employed them.

Employers, with the consent of the employes, can deduct from salaries the amount pledged, while banks, by means of ample correspondence, can follow up pledges made them.

Instead, the survey was conducted only among those persons who had promised to do their buying at post-offices and it showed that:

Of the 1000 promised subscribers questioned, 823 already had made their first purchases. Only 18.9 per cent of the total was listed as "doubtful" by the investigators, while 1.5 per cent was termed "insincere."

Here are some examples, reported by the investigators, of how New York's poor are keeping faith with their country:

"We rang an apartment bell. A huge man appeared at the door. We read a name from a list. 'Yes, that's my daughter,' he said, and suddenly she appeared, a little girl about 9 years old. She said she had signed the pledge and her father gives her money every week to buy stamps. The father looked grave. 'Yes, we buy stamps and we would buy more,' he said. 'But I'm a butcher for a wholesale house and we've had trouble getting livestock. I've worked only two days this week'."

"A 13-year-old girl in another house had pledged $1 a week. She minds children and runs errands to make her dollar every week."

"A trim housewife said 'Yes, we are buying stamps, even though my husband has no job. We have three children and only a little money, but we want to do what ye can. We escaped from Belgium. My husband is a good technician. But he can't get work. People are suspicious. It's very hard, because we want to see Hitler beaten as much as Americans do'."

"One woman with a critically ill husband makes $8 a week and yet she purchases 50 cents in war stamps weekly without fail."

"A waitress and her laborer husband buy a $25 bond every two weeks. The proof was there, as was the money for the next bond"

"We encounter all kinds of situations but some of the most impressive stories came from refugees. These particular people, having lost nearly all their worldly possessions, are much more aware of the destruction and depravity that war brings. They are willing to pay back to the country that shelters them by buying stamps and bonds."

"One mother told us: 'Buying those stamps has made a new person out of Wilbur.' Wilbur is 13. He was positively the laziest boy in the world. He was so lazy he wouldn't even bother taking off his dirty socks when he went to bed at night. But now—such a change! He got himself a job as a caddy in order to buy stamps. He's filling his books fast with earnings and tips. And he keeps me busy washing his socks so he can have clean ones'."

New York Cotton

New York, July 30 (AP).—Cotton futures today sank to the lowest levels since early June with closing prices 50 to 55 cents a bale lower.

Factors contributing to the decline were:

The steadily improving tenor of crop news, the tendency to revise crop estimates toward the 13 million bale mark in contrast with earlier belief it would be only about 11½ million, and the uncertainties revolving around price control measures.

Nine New York Cotton Exchange memberships today sold at auction for the following prices: three at $3000, one at $3050, two at $3100, two at $3150 and one at $3200.

Silver Trade In Quandary On Supplies

By the Associated Press

The Treasury uncovered a situation yesterday which, Secretary Morgenthau said, made it doubtful whether there would be any more silver available for jewelry, silverware or other non-war uses for the duration.

Treasury experts said, however, that the industry was working on some possibilities.

They explained that priorities prevent non-war users from getting any more imported silver, which costs 35 cents an ounce in contrast to American-mined silver which the Treasury is required by law to buy at 71.11 cents an ounce.

The Treasury has made it possible for American miners to sell some of this higher cost silver to industry through some technical postponements in delivery dates on silver already sold to the Treasury. This will enable some mines to sell to industry the silver that they have technically sold to the Treasury, and make good their contracts with the Treasury out of future production.

However, Treasury experts said, many manufacturers could not use 71-cent silver without raising the prices of the jewelry, silverware or other items. Present price regulations prohibit this, and the industry is seeking permission to charge higher prices.

If they fail to get these higher prices for their finished products, the experts said, a few of the manufacturers might be able to use the 71-cent silver anyway, and make up the difference out of their profits, especially since the cost of the silver is not always the most important cost in making a finished silver product.

Another possibility, Morgenthau revealed, is that the Treasury owns five million ounces of unobligated silver which could be sold to industry. However, the Treasury wants to keep this silver for possible emergencies.

U. S. Rubber Net Off on Provision For War Losses

New York, July 30 (AP).—The United States Rubber Co. reported today for the six months ended June 30 net income of $1,554,841 after war loss provisions of $2,741,649.

F. B. Davis, jr., chairman and president, said in an accompanying statement:

"Due to conditions caused by the war and to the tentative nature of any presently determined profits directors have deemed it wise to postpone action on dividends."

(No dividends have been paid on either common or preferred stocks so far this year.)

Profit for the six months was equal to $2.39 a share on the 8 per cent non-cumulative preferred stock and compared with $6,203,314 or $2.07 a share on the common stock after preferred dividend requirements in the first six months of 1941.

Tax provision amounted to $8,886,477 under the 1941 law and the company set aside an additional $3,220,000 for tax contingencies.

B. and L. Assets Show Rise

Combined assets of Washington building and loan associations gained more than 10 million dollars in the year ended June 30.

According to a monthly report compiled by F. Willson Camp, secretary of the District of Columbia Building and Loan League, resources last year totaled $165,698,628 while at the close of business, July 30, the sum of $175,926,435 was recorded.

During the year share money rose $8,507,926 to a new high of $153,329,213. On the other side of the ledger real estate loans increased $9,420,000 to another high of $164,141,240.

A significant reduction in the amount of money placed for construction and new houses is noted, due principally to priorities in building material. However, refinancing and other loans were fairly active with $4,623,000 being placed by the units during June as compared to $4,828,000 a year ago.

Local Water Bonds Offered

A new issue of $1,200,000 Washington Suburban Sanitary District (Maryland) 2¼ per cent water bonds has been awarded to a banking group headed by Shields & Co.

The bonds, dated August 1, 1942, and due serially from August 1, 1943, to 1982, were being reoffered at prices to yield .50 per cent for the 1943 maturity to 2.25 per cent for the 1972 maturity. The 1973 to 1982 maturities were priced at 100 to 99, plus accrued interest.

North American Net Rises

The North American Co., public utility holding company which holds a large stock interest in Washington Railway & Electric Co., reported for the three months ended June 30 consolidated net income of $4,699,863, equal after preferred dividends to 44 cents a share on the common stock. This compared with $4,326,840 or 39 cents a share in the June quarter of last year.

Pointing out that the latest earnings were based on 1941 tax rates, E. L. Shea, president, said that if adjusted for the 1942 tax levies adopted by the House the June quarter net income would be reduced to 31 cents a common share.

Similarly the profit for the 12 months ended June 30 would be reduced from $1.99 a common share, as reported, to $1.68 a share under the new taxes.

Softness in Blue Chip Chemicals Unsettles General List; Rails Display Mild Buoyancy

New York, July 30.—Rails and scattered industrials attracted mild buying support in today's stock market although softness of blue chip chemicals stemmed any real recovery trend.

Rising carrier earnings contrasted with falling profits for most industrial corporations due to mounting taxes and other costs. Bids and offers in both groups apparently continued to be based on these considerations. Threats to dividends in numerous companies remained as a chilling influence.

On the side of the optimists was the heavy and persistent bombing of Nazi territory and signs of a little stiffer Russian resistance to the German Caucasian drive.

Selling dried up at the start but rallying tendencies were limited. There were a few relatively wide declines at the last although variations mostly were in fractions.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was off .1 of a point at 36.2. Of 552 individual issues traded, 196 were down, 172 up and 184 unchanged. Transfers amounted to 250,640 shares compared with 292,590 Wednesday.

Bethlehem Steel ended up ¾ at 52⅛ and, after the close, directors rpotted second quarter net of $1.49 a share against $1.51 in the first period and $1.34 in the like 1941 quarter. The same dividend as paid in seven preceding quarters, namely $1.50, was voted on the common.

Union Pacific was up ⅞ as the road disclosed six months' net of $5.55 a share compared with $1.70 in the like period a year ago.

Monsanto Chemical was off 3, Allied Chemical, 2¼, du Pont, 1¾ and Eastman Kodak, 1¾. Lesser losers were U. S. Steel, Boeing, Anaconda, American Can and U. S. Gypsum.

U. S. Distributing preferred, an odd-lot issue, jumped 2½ points to a new 1942 top. In front elsewhere were Santa Fe, Texas & Pacific Railway, Atlantic Coast Line, American Telephone, Chrysler, General Motors, Westinghouse, Western Union and U. S. Rubber.

Bonds were uneven and commodities lower. At Chicago wheat was off ⅝ to ¼ cents a bushel, corn down ⅝ to ¾ and hogs up 15 to 25 cents. Cotton retreated 50 to 55 cents a bale.

In the Curb small advances were recorded for Glen Alden Coal, American Light, Pantepec and United Wall Paper. On the offside were American Cyanamid, Gulf Oil, N. J. Zinc and Creole Petroleum. Turnover here aggregated 52,065 shares versus 53,285 yesterday.

J. & L. Acquitted Of OPA Charge

Pittsburgh, July 30 (AP).—The Government's injunction suit charging the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation with buying scrap iron at prices in excess of price ceilings set by the Office of Price Administration was dismissed by Federal Judge N. P. Schoonmaker today.

The court held that Jones & Laughlin had not paid for two cars of sub-grade scrap—"Nor had bound itself to pay"— and, in addition, had protested that the material in the cars did not meet specifications of No. 1 heavy melting steel.

"We cannot see," the Court concluded, "that by accepting and using this scrap, the Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation committed any act that would infringe the price regulations as long as it did not pay a price higher than that fixed by the regulation. That it has not done."

Banks' Idle Cash Off 100 Million in Week

By the Associated Press

Lendable excess reserves of banks declined 100 million dollars to a total of $2,200,000,000 in the week ended July 29. The Federal Reserve Board attributed the decline to a 101 million dollars increase in money in circulation.

SEC Proposes Over-Counter Data Ruling

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, July 30.—A rule to require dealers in over-the-counter securities to disclose bid and askings prices to prospective customers who thus will be provided with adequate information on market conditions was proposed by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The rule, described as an "equalization" measure, is designed to give uninformed over-the-counter customers the same protection as provided by stock exchanges on listed securities and to curb large markups on securities.

The proposed rule is being sent to about 100 organizations and individuals in the trade with a request for their comment by August 12. The proposal, which plugs a loophole in the Securities Act of 1933 on the disclosure of prices, then will be discussed by a "subcommittee of financial leaders and SEC staff members who will report to a main committee August 17.

The measure, drawn up by the SEC's trading and exchange division, is one of the first to stem from the meeting of the SEC with security trade heads who hope to work out solutions to problems of mutual concern.

As now written, the suggested rule would require over-the-counter dealers in bonds and stocks to exercise due diligence in determining market prices and informing the customer at the time of the sale or purchase. Dealers also would be required to keep permanent records of such information which would be assessible to the SEC.

The SEC within the past year considered almost a dozen cases of fraud charges against dealers in such cases.

The rule would eliminate the drawing of a fine line as to what constitutes a fair sale or purchase price for such securities. It would permit the customer to make his own choice to buy or sell with full information on the market.

Listen!
with Glynn

(By Frances Hall for Paul Glynn on Vacation)

Narrator David Ross reads many inspiring editorials on the "Keep Working, Keep Singing, America" program broadcast at 6:30 p. m. Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

On July 15 one of these editorials was read into the Congressional Record by Representative Samuel A. Weiss, of Pennsylvania. Here it is:

"There was a dream . . . that men could one day speak the thoughts of their own choosing. There was a hope . . . that men could one day stroll through streets at evening, unafraid. There was a prayer . . . that each could speak to his own God in his own church. That dream, that hope, that prayer became America! Great strength, youthful heart, vast enterprise, hard work made it so. Now that same America is the dream . . . the hope . . . the prayer of our world. Our freedom, its dream. Our strength, its hope. Our swift race against time, its prayer! We must not fail the world now. We must not fail to share our freedom with it afterwards . . . Keep singing keep working and fight for America!"

Norman H. Davis, national chairman of the American Red Cross, appears on the "Thus We Live" program tonight at 9:45 to tell us of the establishment of overseas clubs by the Red Cross.

These clubs, manned by American personnel trained by the Red Cross, operate for the benefit of American servicemen in many foreign countries.

Contract Bridge

"The advantage of the shutout opening bid is well shown by the accompanying hand," writes L. E. M.; the cards are shown in today's box. "With both sides vulnerable I opened four spades; West hesitated long, and then doubled.

"I trumped the heart king, and the hand was a laydown when the queen of clubs dropped. The opponents have five hearts cold—six if anything but a club is led. We scored 740 points (240 trick score, 500 rubber bonus) on the hand when they might easily have made 1430.

Today's Hand

Both Sides Vulnerable
SOUTH DEALER

NORTH: ♠ 2 ♡ 7532 ◇ 864 ♣ J9753
WEST: ♠ A986 ♡ AK64 ◇ A83 ♣ Q10
EAST: ♠ 5 ♡ QJ1098 ◇ KQ1097 ♣ 64
SOUTH: ♠ KQJ10743 ♡ None ◇ J2 ♣ AK82

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
4 ♠	Dbl.	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead: K ♡.

"I received commendations for making a good bid, but it seemed really the only one possible; am I right?"

L. E. M. made an excellent bid, as results prove, even though he is a bit enthusiastic about the points. East and West would normally win. At duplicate, for example, some tables would play the hand at five hearts by East-West, bid and made, but most scores would show five spades, doubled, down one, for a save by North-South. Few East-West pairs would attempt six hearts, and those that did would not be likely to make it, especially with South on lead. The king of clubs would be led first, and it would not take long for the ace to follow.

While South's bid was good, especially because of the surprise feature of it, East's pass of the double was poor. His two-suited hand is of little value on the defense, and it is more than likely that his partner has support for one or both of his suits. He could try five diamonds, and if that didn't seem to set right and the adversaries doubled, he could switch to five hearts. If East were allowed to play at either of these contracts he would win the board, scoring 600 or 500 points. But North-South probably would save with one more spade, and the contract would be played at five spades, doubled, down one, the defenders winning two diamonds and the ace of trumps.

FPC Initiates Steps to Prosecute Arkansas Power & Light Co.

A full inquiry was ordered by the Federal Power Commission yesterday "so that appropriate steps may be taken to transmit evidence to the Attorney General of the United States for the prosecution of Arkansas Power & Light Co. and such of its officers or employes as may be responsible for attempting to destroy books and records."

Destruction was attempted, the agency said, on the day it sought missing records of the company and its predecessors, in connection with an investigation of the original cost of the Arkansas properties.

The commission said yesterday's order followed a report by George T. Cross, an FPC staff member, that on July 22 he was in the company's offices in Pine Bluff, Ark., and noted that a large waste basket was being filled with documents, correspondence and other papers from the files of O. C. Shores, the company's executive assistant.

A review of the papers, the agency quoted the Cross report, disclosed a file of the late Harvey C. Couch, former president of the company, "showing that the books and records of Arkansas' predecessor companies, now being sought by the Federal Power Commission, were not made available to an examiner of the Federal Trade Commission during that agency's investigation of the company."
